ROK/US Alliance aircraft conduct extended deterrence mission

UNC/CFC/USFK PUBLIC AFFAIRS, U.S. FORCES KOREA
PUBLIC AFFAIRS, U.S. FORCES KOREA

OSAN AIR BASE, Republic of Korea -- In a demonstration of the steadfast commitment to the Republic of Korea's defense, a United States Air Force B-52 Stratofortress from Andersen Air Force Base, Guam conducted a low-level flight Jan 10 in the vicinity of Osan, South Korea, in response to recent provocative action by North Korea.

The B-52 was joined by a ROK F-15K Slam Eagle and a U.S. F-16 Fighting Falcon.

"The flight today demonstrates the strength and capabilities of the Alliance," said Gen. Curtis M. Scaparrotti, United Nations Command, Combined Forces Command, U.S. Forces Korea commander. "The close military cooperation between the United States and the Republic of Korea ensures we are ready to respond at any time to those who would threaten stability and security."

In a statement to reporters gathered at Osan Air Base prior to the flight, United Nations Command, U.S. Forces Korea deputy commander and U.S. Seventh Air Force commander, Lt. Gen. Terrence O'Shaughnessy, highlighted the capabilities and readiness of the ROK - U.S. Alliance.

"B-52 missions reinforce the U.S. commitment to the security of our allies and partners, and demonstrate one of the many alliance capabilities available for the defense of the Republic of Korea," O'Shaughnessy said.

Upon completion of the flight over South Korea, the B-52 returned to Guam.

Team Minot "Lean In" to host trio of champion female Airmen

SENIOR MASTER SGT. JODI FLUGEL | 5TH MEDICAL GROUP

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. -- Throughout much of my military career I'll admit that I wasn't a "champion" of women. I was trained in dental and like most medical field occupations, there tends to be more females than males in the enlisted roles. So while I was surrounded by women, it never occurred to me to wonder why my unit was never led by a female Chief Master Sergeant. Worse, because I never saw or endured the kind of sex discrimination that I heard about, I tended to downplay the stories shared by those who were being discriminated against at work. Looking back I wonder why my "female senses" didn't perk up enough to be concerned by the fact that we seem to lose women as we get higher in rank--didn't I want to be higher in rank one day? Was my world view just skewed from growing up in a rare work center dynamic?

According to the Secretary of the Air Force, Deborah James, in a Reuters article from March 2015, while the Air Force recruits more women than any of our sister services, "they leave the service during the mid-career phase at twice the rate of men." Why do we lose women at a higher rate than men, even in female-saturated career fields? In the same article, Secretary James introduced an initiative to recruit more females into the Air Force, but Team Minot, it's our job to ensure we retain them.

In recent years, I've experienced work centers outside the medical group and have seen a dramatic difference in the way women are treated and perceived. The reality is, not everyone gives respect based on work ethic. This is not always the fault of the males in the shop--we women tend to underestimate ourselves and we do not give ourselves enough credit for the skills we have. We don't speak up when we should. This invites the perception that we are not strong enough to handle the roles we want.

Sheryl Sandberg, the chief operating officer at Facebook, shared a story relating when she invited 15 executives from across Silicon Valley to a discussion on the economy. After inviting everyone to get some food and take a seat, she witnessed the men taking their food and sitting at the large conference room table while the four women in the room got their food and sat in chairs behind the table. When asked to join everyone at the conference table, the women politely declined and stayed in their seats. What this did was essentially made these women spectators at the discussion versus legitimate partners in the discussion.

As females, we hurt ourselves when we politely decline. Our voice is not heard as clearly when we contribute from the sidelines. Women should feel empowered to sit at the table because their work ethic, job knowledge and experience enables them to contribute to the discussion. As leaders, we are missing out on different perspectives and great ideas if we do not solicit from everyone in the room, both men and women.

So now with my new experiences, you could say that I am a "champion" of women. I've spoken to enough males and females in this military to understand that, as a whole, we need to do a better job discussing the differences between us. We need to learn how to encourage those women who feel more comfortable sitting in chairs behind the table to join the conversation at the table instead. This will lead to a better-rounded, successful environment.

Team Minot's Lean In brings you the first of many of these exact discussions with three of its very own champions this Friday, Jan. 15 at 1500 in the Professional Development Center. Chief Master Sgt. Fay Noil, 91st Missile Wing command chief, Col. Stacy Huser 91st Operations Group commander and Col. Tasha Pravecek 5th Medical Group commander, will sit on the panel for our discussion. I hope to see you there!

Community Programming and Partnership office

SENIOR AIRMAN SAHARA L. FALES | MINOT AIR FORCE BASE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. -- Minot Air Force Base, North Dakota is one of 19 bases that is now the home to a Community Programming and Partnership Office. The USAF Manpower, Personnel and Services Center in San Antonio pushed out a test for the bases to try out the program, which was implemented in April of 2015.

The purpose of the program is to bring military members, families and communities together by building cohesion through programming. They hope that integrating both on and off the installation will foster pride in both the community and the Air Force.

DoD Morale, Welfare and Recreation research results identified unit participation as an extremely important mechanism to retain, prepare and unite service members.

"The goal is build a better community and name for Minot Air Force Base," said Alicia Thornton-Murray, 5th Force Support Squadron community service flight commander. "Our office wants to show our military members that Minot Air Force Base is a unique destination and you can enjoy what this great state has to offer."

Through the use of surveying they have noted the requests of MAFB Airmen and are beginning to meet those requests.

"We have been given a lot of excellent feedback on what our Minot family wants and needs to help improve quality of life," said Thornton-Murray. "We have begun booking trips and partnering with local businesses to bring discounted tickets and events to our base personnel. We will continue to partner with local community and businesses to provide top-notch programs."

She thinks that the program will be successful as long as they continue to receive feedback and support from Airmen. The 5th FSS will be opening an Information, Tickets and Tours office which is slated for 2016.

For more information find them on Facebook at Minot AFB Community Partnership and Programming Office.

Air Force Reserve options for Active Duty Airmen

TECH. SGT. ALEX BENNINGFIELD | 5TH FORCE SUPPORT SQUADRON

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. -- The Air Force Reserve, the third largest MAJCOM, provides many options for Active Duty Airmen whom have decided to separate or are on the fence about re-enlisting.

Currently there is the Palace Chase process which allows members to apply for early separation. Members may apply once they have completed half of their initial enlistment and are not pending involuntary separation.

The Palace Chase process not only allows members serving a six year contract to transfer to a part time status at three years, or two years for a four year enlistee. Members are also able to retrain into a new AFSC at a location of their choice. This process is most beneficial to members who know exactly where they will live at; for instance moving back home to attend a specific college.

Palace Chase applicants, will get to enjoy many of the benefits allotted to them during Active Duty such as 100 percent Tuition Assistance, access to military installations and all benefits within and a retirement plan.

Members who are approved for Palace Chase by Air Force Personnel Center (AFPC) will serve twice the length of their remaining contract. For instance if a member has one year remaining they will be in the Air Force Reserve for two years before they can re-enlist or completely separate.

The second option for Airmen is called Palace Front. This program allows for a direct transfer to the Air Force Reserve upon completion of a member's current contract. This program also allows for a member to transfer without a break in service, and additionally opens up retraining options if the member was denied retraining earlier.

A member can start the Palace Front process within six months of their date of separation. Applying for this program will have no negative effects on any leave or out-processing planned.

Both programs require that the member be physically fit by having a current passing PT test, medically qualified as identified either in the yearly Physical Health Assessment (PHA) or the member's separation physical.

Some additional requirements may arise in specific situations, for instance a member must meet all requirements for a new AFSC IAW the Air Force Enlisted Classification Directory (AFECD) if they are retraining.

For any questions about the Palace Chase or Palace Front programs and options within the Air Force Reserve please contact Tech. Sgt. Alex Benningfield, the Air Force Reserve in-service recruiter at 701-723-4010 or Alex.Benningfield.1@us.af.mil

Solar Ready Vets program to begin first class at Hill AFB

CRYSTAL YOUNG | 75TH AIR BASE WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AFNS) -- The Solar Ready Vets program announced by President Barack Obama during a visit to Hill Air Force Base in April 2015 will begin training the first class of 24 veterans transitioning to the civilian workforce.

The training, which begins Feb. 1, is being provided by Salt Lake Community College in partnership with the Department of Energy, which oversees the initiative. Some of the training will take place in Hill classrooms and some will be online "self-driven" learning.

"We've got to be relentless in our work to grow the economy and create good jobs,"

Obama said during his visit. "I think everybody here at Hill understands that one of the most important aspects of national security is strong economic security."

Hill was chosen to be part of the program based on the number of exiting military personnel from the installation, the strength of the surrounding solar market and the capacity of nearby training institutions.

The base acquires 20 percent or more of its overall energy from renewable energy sources. The base's solar array installation was completed in June 2009, making it Utah's largest ground-mounted photovoltaic system at the time.

"We take pride in the energy initiatives we have underway here," said Col. Ron Jolly, the 75th Air Base Wing installation commander.

Obama said the new program is one of many steps to help nearly 700,000 veterans and military spouses get a job.

Hill is the fourth base to implement the program, which is already underway at Camp Pendleton, California; Fort Carson, Colorado; and Naval Air Station Norfolk, Virginia; and has already delivered 150 military veterans ready-to-begin careers in the solar energy career field, one of the fastest growing job sectors in the country.

While veterans are not guaranteed a job, the DOE reports that all of the participating veterans have been extended job offers from renewable energy companies participating in the initiative. Starting salaries for these types of positions average $20 to $24 per hour. The program prepares veterans to be strong candidates for a wide range of solar energy careers, including management, photovoltaic installation, sales and technical positions.

According to the DOE, the Defense Department is the largest consumer of energy in the federal government. So, to meet new goals set out in an executive order signed March 19, 2015, for the federal government to reduce emissions, some of the Solar Ready Vets graduates may return to bases, helping build solar arrays that improve energy security.

The program is tied to the DOD's SkillBridge initiative, a program designed to equip active-duty military personnel within six months of moving to veteran status with skills to enter the civilian workforce.

The DOE is working with the DOD to expand Solar Ready Vets to a total of 10 military bases by late spring 2016.

"We have eight currently registered with more Airmen expressing interest every day. Many are currently working through the application process," said Capt. Joshua Tate, the deputy director of the 75th Force Support Squadron.

The classes are paid for by the DOE during the startup phase and funding for continuing classes can be paid for by the members' GI Bill benefits, Tate said.

KC-135s surpass 100,000 combat hours

TECH. SGT. TERRICA Y. JONES
379TH AIR EXPEDITIONARY WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

AL UDEID AIR BASE, Qatar (AFNS) -- The KC-135 Stratotanker fleet at Al Udeid Air Base, Qatar, flew more than 14,700 sorties in 2015 accumulating 103,419 combat hours in support of Operations Inherent Resolve and Freedom's Sentinel.

"We provide refueling to every flying unit in the area of responsibility which is Syria, Yemen, Iraq, and Afghanistan and supported 12 coalition nations," said Lt. Col. James Murray, the 340th Expeditionary Air Refueling Squadron director of operations. "We support aircraft 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year so they can do their mission."

Murray said over 60 KC-135s took part in achieving over 100,000 combat hours. Each KC-135 crew flies an average of seven hours a day and off-loads an average of 50,000 gallons of fuel per mission.

Murray said keeping an operations tempo of this magnitude is herculean.

"Imagine 12 airplanes flying 24 hours a day, it's incredible," he said. "If we were not out there to give gas to all our receivers they we would have to fly shorter missions."

Murray said the KC-135's combat hour achievement was possible because of active-duty, Reserve and National Guard Airmen.

"There are different Air Force components like active duty, Reserve and Air National Guard out here," Murray said.

"There are also different types of tankers on the ramp, with different modifications, so usually a new crew has to be trained or certified in everything that we have here at AUAB. Having an aircrew trained gives us the flexibility to go out and fly any tanker, and our squadron does internal training to make that happen."

Senior Airman Timothy Weber, a 340th EARS boom operator, shared what it was like to be part of the combat hour milestone.

"The tempo can become intense here," Weber said. "You have to adapt because it's busy and the environment is so dynamic. You can take off with a plan and it can change drastically when you are in the air, but it gets exciting and I get to see it happen right in front of me, I love flying."

Murray said the 340th EARS surpassed 100,000 combat hours without realizing it because it happened faster than the unit anticipated.

The combat hour achievement is the result of various units at Al Udeid AB working together to make the mission happen, Murray said.

PRAIRIE ADVENTURES

BY PATRICIA STOCKDILL

"When you put the badge on you have a responsibility that you didn't have before. You have a trust responsibility with the public that you didn't have before to do your best...as a law enforcement officer, public trust is critical."

– N.D. Game and Fish Department Enforcement Division Chief Bob Timian.

Historically, many state wildlife agencies were founded based on the need to provide wildlife law enforcement.

The same holds true for North Dakota, where enforcement and fish stocking laid the N. D. Game and Fish Department's early foundation. "We're one of the oldest law enforcement agencies in the state," described Game and Fish Department Enforcement Division Chief Bob Timian, in place since about statehood.

Like life in general, times change: Gone are days when wardens used their personal vehicles – usually cars – and equipment. Training and technology has evolved just as it has for people in all lifestyles.

Nowadays, it takes anywhere from as little as 12 months to more than 18 months for a new hiree to complete the process of becoming a game warden.

The number of applicants for the initial game warden examination has decreased in recent years, Timian described, which is likely typical for most types of law enforcement. When Timian applied 30 years or so ago, he was one of about 90 people milling around waiting to take the test. At the time the Game and Fish Department was hiring a couple of wardens. In 2016, it's likely only about 30 or 40 people will apply for the next exam, he continued.

Applicants for the initial exam must have a 4-year college degree and no felony criminal record. The selection process includes one-on-one questioning. A board of several people within the Enforcement Division typically interview six or eight finalists.

From there it involves an extensive background check, drug test, psychological exam, and "if that person is not a licensed peace officer they must go to the state peace officer training program," Timian continued. "Then the process starts of making you a game warden."

That includes working a field-training program followed by approximately 6 months of work under a supervisory officer with final an evaluation by the supervisor. If given a good evaluation, "then you're officially on staff." Timian described. When everything is final and a warden is officially a warden, it's about a $100,000 salary, operating, and training investment to get that person in the field.

North Dakota has one of the smallest wildlife enforcement staffs in the country. In addition to Timian, there is an administrative assistant, one investigations supervisor, one operations supervisor/boating law administrator, a warden pilot, four district warden supervisors, and 29 district field wardens.

Enforce wildlife laws are mostly about dealing with people.

Wildlife law enforcement work – like any career path – isn't for everyone. Some people think they may want to be something in life only to discover that once they're in their chosen field; it really wasn't such a calling, after all.

One reason the hiring process is so rigorous, Timian explained is "we want somebody out there with the public that does a good job." Sometimes wardens will leave after a few years but "they're usually with us on average for a fairly long career."

For those choosing that career path, "the law enforcement and game wardens professions is more of a way of life more than a job," Timian said. "It's been 30 years, I'm not done yet, and I would do it again."

Fey, Poehler launch sweet, raunchy Sisters into comedic orbit

NEIL POND | PARADE MAGAZINE

If you're looking for a popcorn alternative to Star Wars, here's something that will send you sailing into a different kind of movie orbit.

In Sisters, Tina Fey and Amy Poehler play a pair of grownup siblings who try to recapture their younger days by staging one final raucous, riotous house party.

Poehler is Maura, the helpful, respectable, responsible younger-sis do-gooder nurse. Fey is Kate, a little older, a good deal wilder and much brassier—but "not a hothead!" as she continually reminds folks. When they find out their mom and dad (James Brolin and Dianne Wiest) have decided to downsize, they return to their childhood home to do everything they can to ward off the potential buyers.

Kate's teenage daughter (Madison Davenport) thinks her jobless-cosmetologist mom is an embarrassment, and she doesn't want to live with her anymore. Can one night of abandon help Maura break free of her dull, nice-girl past—and a lifetime lived in the shadow of the more adventurous, more daring Kate? And will stopping the sale of their home solve their problems—or create bigger ones?

Fey and Poehler, of course, worked together on TV's Saturday Night Live before going on to even greater heights in various other projects, including solo stardom in Parks and Recreation and 30 Rock. Sisters is their first full movie collaboration in seven years, since Baby Mama (2008), and once again they strike comedy gold.

Not only are they funny, they know that things get even funnier by surrounding themselves with funny people and letting them do their stuff. Working from a script by former SNL writer Paula Pell, and under the direction of Jason (Pitch Perfect) Moore, they generously fill the talent pool with current SNL players (Kate McKinnon, Bobby Moynihan), fellow alums (Maya Rudolph, Rachel Dratch), rising stars (Samantha Bee, whose new TBS show, Full Frontal, premieres in January) and a cavalcade of supporting players (John Leguizamo; WWE superstar John Cena; Matt Oberg).

Even Brolin and Wiest, the two veterans of the cast, get plenty of opportunities to joist and jab with their funny bones.

But the movie belongs to its two co-stars, who rock, roll and rule with a crackerjack chemistry that fuels everything, firing on all cylinders from start to finish. Some of it is raunchy, although well within bounds of today's R-rated comedy sandbox. And it's all brisk, bright, some of it even quite sweet, and very, very funny. Somehow grownup jokes Christmas-gift-wrapped by these two smart, classy leading ladies make the dirty seem merely naughty.

There's a giant phallus painted on the wall—and Tina Fey's taking suggestive selfies with it! Haha! What are they pretending to do with those majorette batons? Teehee! Are they really talking so much about sex, drugs and private parts? Hardy-har-har!

The humor is rapid-fire, especially when the banter is zipping, zapping and zinging between Fey and Poehler, whose timing, sense of teamwork and ease around each other suggests that they really might be Sisters, after all. And they're great dance partners, too—they bust a righteous move at their party to the 1993 rap-dance song "Informer" ("a licky boom-boom down") and end the movie with a sweet slow-dance groove that becomes a joyously goofy send-off.

The (comedy) Force is definitely with them.

Chicken Cordon Bleu Noodle Casserole

INGREDIENTS:

- 3 cups cooked chopped chicken
- 1 cup shredded swiss cheese
- 1 cup diced ham
- 12 oz egg noodles
- 2 cans cream of chicken soup
- 1 cup panko bread crumbs
- 16 oz container sour cream
- 1/4 cup melted butter

INSTRUCTIONS:

Cook egg noodles according to package directions, drain. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly spray a 9x13-inch pan with cooking spray. Combine chicken, ham, soup, sour cream, and cheese. Stir in cooked egg noodles. Pour mixture into prepared pan. Mix together panko bread crumbs and melted butter. Sprinkle over top of casserole.

Baked Garlic Parmesan Potato Wedges

INGREDIENTS:

- 3-4 large russet potatoes, sliced into wedges
- 2 teaspoons Italian seasoning
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/2 cup shredded parmesan cheese
- 2 teaspoons salt
- optional: fresh parsley (or cilantro), ranch or blue cheese dressing for dipping
- 2 teaspoons garlic powder

INSTRUCTIONS:

Preheat oven to 375. Lightly grease a large baking sheet and set aside. Place potato wedges in a large bowl. Drizzle with olive oil and toss to coat. In a small bowl whisk together salt, garlic powder, and Italian seasoning. Sprinkle potato wedges with the shredded cheese, tossing to coat, then sprinkle with the seasoning mixture. Place potato wedges on prepared baking sheet in a single layer with skin-sides-down. Bake for 25-35 minutes until potatoes are fork-tender and golden. Sprinkle with freshly chopped parsley and dressing for dipping.

8th Annual Beardstock Festival Coming March 2016

TAUBE MUSEUM OF ART

It's time to step back. Time to set aside the razer, look into the mirror and like what you see. It's time for bigger, bolder beards. It's time for Beardstock 2016.

March 12 and 13, beards, bands and North Dakota pride will take over the Holiday Inn Riverside in an event for the hairy at heart. Enjoy free food, the bearded photo booth, limited edition Beardstock apparel, Pride of Dakota vendors, music and more. Participate in beard contests that include best overall, best trimmed and best fake beard and prove just how much you enjoyed putting that razer to bed.

Beards not for you? Take on the mustache contest, where military members who compete get a $5 discount on admission price. For the ladies and children who cannot grow a beard no rib eating contest, where we provide the fake beard and t-shirt and you provide the appetite for victory.

And where there's a great beard, there's usually great music.

Local musicians and nationally-known artists will be playing all day, every day, including nationally recording artists

Disciple, Decyfer Down, Seventh Day Slumber, Spoken, Children 18:3 and more. Check out the rest of the bands, schedule of events and ticket information on Facebook. com/rocktheleaves. Admission is $15.

It's time to step back. Time to show the world that a little bit of hair can be so much more than just a beard—It's a beardolution. Rock on, beard on, and we'll see you there.

matter how hard they try, compete in the fake beard contest and build your own beard at the build your own beard booth and show the men a thing or two. And for those whose stomach is bigger than their beard, participate in the bearded

Community Rocks! 2016 to benefit music program for youth

MINOT STATE UNIVERSITY

With proceeds benefitting the Minot String Academy, the second annual Community

Rocks! concert will be Feb. 6 at the Grand Hotel in Minot. Local orchestra musicians will present three sets of rock favorites by acts such as the Rolling Stones, Aerosmith, Styx, Heart, Metallica, Cold Play and many others. Erik M. Anderson, a junior in Minot State University's music program, arranged many of the songs for the orchestra, and several songs will feature Melissa Spelchen, MSU assistant professor of criminal justice and interim Honors director, on vocals.

The evening begins at 6 p.m. with a social, hors d'oeuvres and silent auction, followed by the first music set at 7. Cash bars will be available throughout the event. Open seating is available in two areas: Reserved seats ($60) are all center rows, while general admission seats are $45. Tickets are available at Budget Music and Video in downtown Minot and at Jacobsen Music on 31st Ave. S.W., Minot. The event is open to all ages.

Evidence shows that early musical training has profound effects on the developing child, producing long-lasting changes in motor abilities and brain structure. Funds from Community Rocks! 2016 will provide the instruments, supplies and instruction necessary to begin the Minot String Academy. The academy will be dedicated to providing one-on-one lessons and string orchestra experiences to low-income children, beginning in the first grade. This head start will provide social and academic benefits, as well as create the future leaders of the Minot Public Schools orchestra program.

Co-founded by Minot State Professors Erik Anderson and Andy Bertsch, Community Rocks! exemplifies local initiative and talent coming together to benefit the community. The orchestra, which plays favorites from the '60s to the present, consists of local string, brass, and wind players, plus trap set and electric bass.

For questions, contact Erik Anderson at erik.anderson@minotstateu.edu or 858-3576.

MOTHER-DAUGHTER WEEKEND WORKSHOP 1/02/2016 9:00 AM - 1/03/2016 3:00 PM

Hampton Inn and Suites Minot Airport, 1400 N Broadway, Minot, ND. Duration: 2 days; Saturday 9-5 and Sunday 10-3 with a one-hour lunch break each day along with scheduled 10-minute breaks Location: Meeting room, Hampton Inn and Suites Minot Airport, 1400 N Broadway, Minot, ND The Mother-Daughter Workshop is a structured support group for mother and their daughters, ages 11-18. The purpose of this workshop is to promote a healthy and sustaining bond between mothers and daughters during the transitional years from girlhood to young womanhood. The changing nature of the mother-daughter relationship during adolescence is one of the most widely recognized and commonly shared challenges in our society. During these sessions the participants have whole group activities as well as small group components in which the mothers and daughters meet separately to address role-specific challenges, needs, and strategies. The whole group comes together again for sharing of stories or messages, commitments, and acknowledgements. We will focus on female-responsive skills and activities that encourage development of: Empathy and Understanding Healthy Communication Skills Stress Reduction Skills Clear and Reasonable Limit Setting, Expectations and Boundaries Accountability and Ownership Practices Relationship Success Strategies and Affirmations We will also explore meanings and messages about being female. Through listening, practice of new skills, the sharing of strengths, and the benefits of sisterhood celebrated during the workshop, mothers and daughters can enjoy this time of transition and find their place in the community of women whose collective wisdom contributes to the well being of girls, women, and families across the globe. Cost: $100 per mother/daughter duo Snacks and beverages will be provided throughout the day.
