CGOs experience Killdeer battlefield

AIRMAN 1ST CLASS JESSICA WEISSMAN | MINOT AIR FORCE BASE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D., --

Twenty Team Minot company grade officers took a staff ride to Killdeer Mountain Battlefield State Historic Site, North Dakota, to learn about leadership and historic military operations.

A staff ride is when an organization chooses a battlefield and members study leadership habits, military operations and campaign results to brief other members the information they have learned.

"Staff rides focus on leadership qualities, combat tactics and campaign logistics from a specific time frame and compare those things to how we approach battles today," said Lt. Col. James Slaton, 91st Security Forces Group deputy commander.

The 1864 Battle of Killdeer Mountain was a civil war between a union force, led by U.S. Army brevet Brig. Gen. Alfred Sully, and multiple tribes of Indian forces who were led primarily by Native American chief, Sitting Bull. The battle was the largest engagement between U.S. forces and Indian forces; there were 2,200 U.S. troops and 1,600 Indian warriors.

"We completed this staff ride because it is a great hands-on example of war, without physically going into combat," Slaton said. "You can really dissect the campaign and learn different aspects. We take officers who haven't experienced combat and talk about leadership qualities during combat then versus now and lessons learned from the outcome of the battle," Slaton said.

Behind the scenes: 5th LRS deployment plans

AIRMAN 1ST CLASS JONATHAN MCELDERRY | MINOT AIR FORCE BASE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Since December 2016, the 5th Logistics Readiness Squadron deployment and distributions flight Installation Deployment Readiness Cell at Minot Air Force Base planned and executed all logistics operations in preparation for a U.S. Central Command deployment.

Leading up to the deployment, the IDRC hosted at least three meetings every month with key personnel from around the base, according to 2nd Lt. Nicholas Chapman, 5th Bomb Wing installation deployment officer.

"Our role is to communicate, coordinate, facilitate and follow up," Chapman said. "When we learn that 5th BW Airmen are deploying, we bring functional experts from across the wing together to ensure all deployment requirements are identified and met."

Chapman added when the unit began building the mission format, it was identified they needed a variety of personnel, to include pilots, mission planners, combat systems officers, maintainers, etc.

"This deployment was larger and more intricate than any the 5th BW has seen in the last twelve years," Chapman said. "We had to ensure multiple units had all the personnel and equipment needed to support sustained combat operations in USCENTCOM, to include more than 400 personnel and 290,000 pounds of cargo."

The IDRC, 5th Force Support Squadron installation personnel readiness and the unit deployment managers are also responsible for ensuring deployers completed all requirements leading up to their departure.

"The PDF is one of our last checks before we send deployers out the door," Chapman said. "Leading to this point, Airmen get

Sextortion: Don't be a victim

2ND LT. BRYANT MISHIMA-BAKER | 91ST MISSILE MAINTENANCE SQUADRON

A recent trend in online crime is targeting Airmen via social media and dating applications. It is being called "Sextortion."

How many times have we received emails about winning the lottery or that a deceased member of a royal family is our distant relative and we need to wire money to get our inheritance?

The way crime chooses to target military personnel continues to evolve as fast as the advancing world of technology allows it.

We as Airmen need to be aware of these trends and protect ourselves and our wingmen from the possible harm that it can bring about.

An Airman who is looking to date or connect could be contacted via Facebook or any other popular app by what appears to be an attractive person. The requester will often do research using social media to find familiar names or acquaintances to put the unsuspecting Airman at ease. Over time, the conversation turns to video chat requests and invitations for the Airman to undress or perform sexually explicit acts. What these Airmen don't know is the video coming from the other side is often fake and they are being recorded.

Suddenly, the screen goes blank; the requester informs the Airman about the recording and threatens to release the video unless they send money or enter their credit card information into a recorder, which is often a subscription to a pornographic site.

Though cases of this most often involve male Airmen, the same situation applies whether the victim is male or female.

"This is actually happening to our Airmen," said Maj. Carlos De Dios, 5th Bomb Wing deputy staff judge advocate. "We are seeing people swindled out of thousands of dollars."

Another similar strategy being used lures Airmen into thinking they have accidentally committed a crime. However, this time after explicit comments, pictures or videos are shared, the perpetrator puts on a guardian role and tells the Airman the person they were communicating with was underage.

The perpetrator will then instruct the Airman to send money to be used to "cancel phone contracts" or other such purposes in order to protect the alleged underage person. The hope is that the Airman will be too nervous to recognize that the scheme is false or too nervous to seek help.

Don't be a victim to one of these schemes! Just knowing these strategies to steal money from you is a start, but you should still take other precautions to prevent this from happening to you.

Here are some tips to further protect yourself:

- Adjust your social media privacy settings.
- Avoid engaging in sexually explicit activities/sharing compromising photos and videos online.

- Make sure that your computer anti-virus software is up-to-date

- If you are not using your devices, make sure that the camera is disabled.

- Most of all, use your common sense.

If you are victim of this type of targeting:

- Stop all communications with the sextortionist

- Don't send any money

- Save all the conversations and information you have had

- contact your commander, AFOSI and base legal office.

Finally, watch out for your wingman.

We all have a responsibility to watch out for one another so we can accomplish the mission. Spread the word and let's not let this sort of thing continue to happen.

20th AF: Command progress update

1ST LT VERONICA PEREZ | 20TH AIR FORCE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Maj. Gen. Anthony Cotton, 20th Air Force and Task Force 214 commander, held an online chat with members of 20th AF March 13, and discussed high-level Air Force and U.S. Strategic Command updates along with ongoing command initiatives pertaining to Airmen.

Always There

Cotton began by foot-stomping the ICBM mission's impact on Air Force operations. He emphasized the fact that nuclear deterrence ensures strategic stability and security in all U.S. wartime operations.

"This is something you do every day," he said. "You allow American troops around the world to operate without contest through global vigilance, global reach and most significantly, global power."

He highlighted the challenges the service faces as it continues to execute the mission with the smallest numbers in history, along with aging weapons systems. However, Cotton explained that the Air Force is set to add 10,000 Airmen this year and to reach 324,000 in the coming years.

With the increase in manpower, Cotton also discussed the need for nuclear modernization and investment in the force's upcoming ground base strategic deterrent, set to completely replace the existing Minuteman III weapon system.

Moving forward, Cotton expressed his support for Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force Kaleth Wright's theme that the Air Force is "Always There," to ensure that every U.S. military mission is successful.

"The ICBM force provides global power at a moment's notice, everywhere at any time," he said.

USSTRATCOM Priorities and Intent//20AF Goals and Priorities

Next, Cotton discussed USSTRATCOM Commander Gen. John E. Hyten's priorities of strategic deterrence, combat-ready forces and decisive response. ICBMs provide a decisive response capable of strategically deterring potential adversaries, he said.

He then introduced Hyten's four areas of intent, which include deliberate planning, providing decisive response, embracing strategic deterrence and developing professionals and capabilities. Next, Cotton explained how this warfighting framework relates to the Numbered Air Force's own mission and vision.

"You provide the ultimate warfighting capability in support of strategic deterrence every day by operating, maintaining, securing, testing and supporting our weapon system," Cotton said. "When called upon by the president of the United States, we stand ready to execute

North Dakota Arts Scene a Standout in March Madness

NORTH DAKOTA LEGENDARY

Bismarck, ND – March is known for inducing sports fever across the United States and North Dakota gets in on the mania. High school basketball tournaments commence this month and the NCAA basketball promise to keep fans on the edge of their seats. Sports isn't the only craze this month: The state is also abuzz with cultural events. Whether you're in the mood for the theater, the arena or getting artsy with the locals, come find your fun this March in North Dakota.

An Abundance of Art
Art is prevalent in this prairie state, so visitors don't have to travel far to experience it. Bismarck utility boxes are wrapped with the work of local artisans and their workmanship is also showcased on murals painted in the city's downtown Art Alley. Spot the vibrantly painted buffalo around Fargo (<http://www.fargomoorhead.org/blog/?p=4938>) or works by the Minot Street Art Movement (https://www.facebook.com/pg/MinotStreetArtMovement/photos/?ref=page_internal) around the Magic City.

For a rural art experience, drive the Enchanted Highway (<http://www.ndtourism.com/regent/attractions/enchanted-highway>) to see a collection of the world's largest scrap metal sculptures or follow the quilt trail in the northeast to view exquisite quilt designs hung on North Dakotan barns (http://www.michigannd.com/index.asp?SEC=56E2236C-0C80-48E6-8187-F5F36F5C1EC2&Type=B_PR). Communities across the state offer unique outlets for people to join together in their appreciation for the cultural arts (<http://jamestownarts.com/>; <http://www.ndhumanities.org/thinkdrink.html>).

The Fargo Film Festival (<http://www.fargofilmfestival.org/>) runs March 21-25 with most screenings at the historic Fargo Theatre. A wide genre of films will compete for various awards, including Best in Show, Competitive Category and Special Awards Category. Bismarck's Dakota Digital Film Festival (<http://dakotadigitalfilmfestival.org/>) is held at the historic Belle Mehus Auditorium where the public can view screenings from local filmmakers and video artists.

Performance arts options are plentiful in North Dakota. Enjoy a production by the Fargo-Moorhead Opera Company (<http://www.fimopera.org/web/splash.aspx>) or catch a live movie theater transmission of the Metropolitan Opera (<http://www.metopera.org/season/in-cinemas/>). Check local listings for live theater performances. In the mood for a concert? Legendary rock band Journey (http://www.fargodome.com/event-page-new?e_id=205) makes an appearance in Fargo this month and choirs and musicians provide live music to audiences across the state.

Want to make your own art? The Makers Movement is moving full steam ahead in this historically do-it-yourself-minded state. North Dakota communities are working to cultivate this movement with events like Artful Happy Hour (<http://jamestownarts.com/>), food and wine events (<http://baconandbeerfargo.com/>); (<http://cdplodge.com/amy-thielens-food-wine-retreat-march-20-23rd-2017>) and craft shows (<http://www.ndtourism.com/events/spring-craft-show>).

Local retailers (www.ungluedmarket.com) and online sites like Etsy are supporting these efforts by offering North Dakota artisans' wares for sale.

The Sport Season
Sports enthusiasts love March and a glance at this month's tournament schedule explains why. Get your fill of hoops with state high school basketball tournaments for girls and boys Class A and Class B, which play out in Minot, Grand Forks and Bismarck (<http://www.ndhsaanow.com/>). West Regional Men's NCAA DI Ice Hockey tournament convenes in Fargo (<http://www.ncaa.com/sports/icehockey-men/d1>) or get in touch with your inner cowboy or girl at a rodeo (http://fargodome.com/event-page-new?e_id=158). There's always the option to participate in the sporting event yourself, like a running or fatbike race (<http://runningintheusa.com/Race/List.aspx?State=ND>; <https://endrasing.com/index.php>).

Whether you're looking for a rich cultural experience or just an opportunity to holler for your team this March, North Dakota has something for everyone.

PRAIRIE ADVENTURES

BY PATRICIA STOCKDILL

"It's kind of a status quo budget."

– N.D. Game and Fish Department Deputy Director Scott Peterson, describing the agency's proposed 2017 – 2019 budget

With only a few weeks remaining in the 2017 North Dakota legislative session, the number of outdoor-related bills is winding down.

Some are still working their way through committees, floor votes, or awaiting Gov. Doug Burgum's approval.

Others ended up in File 13 and may or may not see the light of day in 2019.

Much of the session focuses on money, or given current financial issues, lack of money in state coffers.

When it comes to the N.D. Game and Fish Department, though, it's one agency not reliant on taxpayer revenue.

Hunters and anglers foot the lion's share of the department's revenue, whether through hunting, fishing, and trapping license sales, money earned through federal Wildlife and Sportfish Restoration programs, or even the Watchable Wildlife Check-off on an individual's state income tax refund.

Wildlife and Sportfish Restoration revenue comes from federal taxes hunting and angling manufacturer's pay and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service distributes funds to states.

The legislature and governor still approve the agency's budget, Game and Fish Department Deputy Director Scott Peterson described. The proposed 2017-2019 $83.2 million budget is similar to its 2015 – 2017 budget with adjustments for slightly higher Restoration funding, he added.

However, recognizing the state's overall budget concerns, the Game and Fish Department didn't request any new full-time staff, even though it remains one of the smallest wildlife and natural resource agencies in the country.

Several bills geared towards older hunters didn't make it to Gov. Burgum's desk. Failed bills included a proposal allowing muzzleloader hunters 65 years of age and older to use 4-power scopes, 65-year-old and older archery hunters to use a crossbow during any legal archery season, or a proposal to establish a preference system for lottery drawings for hunters 70 years of age and older.

The concept of a lifetime license also didn't meet the muster among legislators this session, either.

The idea of tweaking nonresident waterfowl seasons failed in two different bills.

One bill still active, House Bill 1150, provides hunters with an option when it comes to applying for species involving preference points, such as mule deer, white-tailed deer, and pronghorn.

Currently, hunters apply and gain a preference point if they aren't drawn.

Hunters don't lose their points if they skip a year and don't apply.

Yet they don't gain a point.

The bill, which passed the House 50 – 42, would allow a hunter to pay the license fee (currently $30 for deer and pronghorn) and forfeit it for a preference point. It benefits hunters who want to gain points but know they wouldn't have an opportunity to hunt in the upcoming season.

For example, a hunter with a Wyoming elk tag whose season runs consecutively with North Dakota's pronghorn season could pay the $30 pronghorn license fee for North Dakota but check a box designating the fee go towards a preference point and not into the upcoming lottery.

HB 1150 was amended in the Senate and now goes to conference committee to iron out differences before going back to a vote.

Even though the legislative session is drawing to a close, outdoor enthusiasts can still voice their opinions and track legislation. It's easy – go to the Game and Fish Department website, (gf.nd.gov), and click "Legislation".

Easter Bunny Rolls

INGREDIENTS:

- 3 cups bread flour
- 2 1/2 tsp Instant dry yeast
- 1 cup warm water
- 2 tbs brown sugar
- 1 tsp salt
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1 egg
- 1 tbs coarse sea salt
- 2 tbs softened butter

INSTRUCTIONS:

Pour warm (not hot!) water into the bowl of a stand mixer fitted with the dough hook attachment. Sprinkle the yeast and 1/2 tsp brown sugar on top of the water. Stir it lightly with a spoon and allow to sit for a few minutes until the mixture is frothy and smells like yeast. (If that's not happening, start over with new yeast.) With the mixer running on low speed, add the remaining brown sugar, salt, oil, and 3 cups of bread flour. Knead on low-medium speed for 2 minutes, until a smooth dough forms. The dough should be thick, yet soft and only slightly sticky. When it pulls away from the sides of the bowl it's ready to knead. Place the dough in a greased bowl and turn the dough over to coat all sides. Cover the bowl with plastic wrap and place it in a warm environment to rise until doubled, about 1-2 hours. Once doubled in size, punch the dough down to release any air bubbles. Remove dough from the bowl and turn it out onto a lightly floured surface. Divide the dough into 8 equal pieces. Heat oven to 350°F (180°C). Line your cookie sheet with parchment paper, a silicone baking mat or lightly grease the cookie sheet. Roll each ball of dough into a rope about 14 inches long. Cut a 1/2-inch piece off the end, and roll into a ball for the tail. Fold the dough rope in half, and loosely twist twice to form the body of the bunny. Place on cookie sheet and press down the overlapping ear a little bit to prevent it from rising too high. To make the bunny tail press ball of dough into folded end of the twist. Repeat with remaining dough to make 8 bunnies. Let the bunnies rise for 5-10 minutes. Brush the tails with egg wash and sprinkle with coarse sea salt. Bake the bunnies for 15-20 minutes until the tops are golden brown and the edges look cooked. Remove the rolls from the oven when they are done and brush butter onto each warm bunny.

SEATTLE GLASS ARTIST COMES TO MINOT

Since the late 1980’s Michael Dupille has worked extensively with glass, having developed and refined a technique for ‘painting with glass’ that uses crushed glass (frit) in combination kiln fired methods. Teaching around the world, Michael is now coming to Minot to teach two classes at Margie’s Studio in downtown Minot.

“Michael was one of the first instructors I was able to take classes with in 2003” says Margie Bolton, owner of Margie’s Studio. “He is an excellent teacher, and his techniques are taught in a way that anyone can leave with a new ability in fused glass.”

Classes with Michael are driven in a way that any level glass enthusiasts can attend. He will be teaching two classes, Fritography with a Twist, on April 21 & 22; and Watercolor Effect, on April 23 & 24. People should call Margie’s Art Glass Studio at 701-837-8555 to reserve a spot.

Celebrate National Library Week At The Base Library

National Library Week is an American Library Association sponsored national observance to celebrate and support libraries, librarians, and library services that has been held in April since 1958. This year's National Library Week will be April 9-15.

The Base Library is celebrating National Library Week with an Open House featuring refreshments, prizes, and a library time-trap game for all ages on Wednesday, April 12. Visitors can stop by anytime between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. In the time-trap game, players will be transported back in time to the Library of Alexandria in 50 BC and have to make their way back to the present day by completing activities or solving puzzles in order to advance forward through six different historical periods from ancient times to 1980. Upon arriving at each historical period, players will receive a one page pamphlet that will provide some background information and introduce them to a historical library from that period. The pamphlets can be put together into a simple book at the end of the program. The game should take most players about 30-45 minutes to complete and doesn't require any prior experience or knowledge on the part of the player though older players may find their memories of library card catalogs helpful for one activity. All players who complete the game will receive a prize.

Regular library programs will be library and literature themed in honor of National Library Week: The Second Saturday kids program at 1 p.m. on Saturday, April 8 will celebrate the mystery genre with stories, detective-kit crafts, and a mystery activity.

Game Day (anytime between 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 11) will include games that the library has created for various programs including a Greek mythology games originally created for programs celebrating the Percy Jackson book series and a cooperative strategy game that was originally created for a Star Wars program for adults and teens.

Wednesday's 10:30 a.m. story time will feature reading and library-related stories and a craft.

For more information about Minot AFB Library programs, visit our Facebook page (Minot Air Force Base Library), Instagram page (Minot AFB Library) or website at tinyurl.com/mafblib.

weapons qualified, receive hands on training and are medically cleared by the 5th Medical Group Public Health office.”

Planning a deployment of this size and scope also comes with various challenges.

“We do not conduct deployments of this scale regularly,” said Tech. Sgt. Casey Wilson, 5th LRS logistics plans NCOIC. “We only have five logistics planners to facilitate the entire process.”

Despite the challenges, Wilson expressed pride in knowing her team’s hard work ensured the deployment went smoothly.

“There’s a lot of pride knowing that such a small office facilitated a deployment of this scale,” Wilson said. “I think everyone involved should be proud to have conducted this deployment with zero movement delays.”

Chapman also talked about how this entire process has been a team effort between every section within the 5th LRS.

“The deployment process becomes an entire LRS function,” Chapman said. “The supply and equipment managers, vehicle operations, air terminal operations, traffic management office, fuels management and vehicle maintenance have all been heavily involved.”

Like Wilson, Chapman is proud to know the importance of their role in this deployment.

“This deployment process has gone smoothly and it shows how well the deployment machine did in ensuring everything was ready to go,” Chapman said. “When everything runs smoothly, it means we’ve done our due diligence.”

Describing his force goals, Cotton expressed how, “caring for Airmen and their families” holds up the other three goals of “safe, secure and effective daily operations, commitment to our warrior ethos, and coaching, training and mentoring.” He elaborated that the command will continue to advocate for family’s professional and quality of life needs, provide an array of services and key spouse support, and strive to achieve stability for nuclear Airmen.

He stressed the importance for ICBM Airmen to see the mission firsthand by experiencing important operations, such as maintenance at launch facilities or touring a launch control center. In the coming year, he encouraged leaders to provide opportunities for Airmen to develop within the mission and in their professional goals.

Activity Report to the Field

Cotton expanded on command activities and progress of ongoing initiatives. 20th AF is developing a new two-week Operation Instructor Qualification Course, which will focus on students executing multiple iterations of instruction in missile procedure trainers and classroom environments.

Next, he highlighted the ICBM Center of Excellence and their plan to send 800 Airmen from across the NAF to professional development trainings and visits.

Cotton drove his focus on continuous improvement as he explained the recent Olympic Sword, which will result in 4,800 changes in technical orders standardizing languages between operators and maintainers, and the hands-on demonstration of electronic TOs at the 90th and 341st Missile Wings.

Following the continuous improvement discussion, Cotton then focused on ways the command is implementing best practices in the field. This includes the Missile Security Operations Concept, which takes lessons learned from downrange force deployments and implements best practices for security forces missile field deployments. A tiger team recently assessed MSOC trials at the 91st MW and critically reviewed the concept of deploying units as a core squadron fighting force. Additionally, Cotton stressed the importance of enhancing security forces training across the board, not only in the nuclear mission, but across the entire Air Force.

In closing, Cotton fielded questions from Airmen and provided feedback on topics such as UH-1N training, the impact cyber will have on nuclear modernization, developments within the Guard and Reserve opportunities for 13Ns, and how to best implement the Chief of Staff of the Air Force’s goal of revitalizing squadrons within the Air Force.

Elizabeth Melahn, 2nd Medical Group wounded warrior advocate, speaks about diversity at the Women's Leadership Symposium on Barksdale Air Force Base, La., March 14, 2017. During the symposium, Milan told her story of overcoming racial adversity during her childhood, and how the military's concept of diversity and equality have evolved over more than 20 years.

BARKSDALE AIR FORCE BASE, La. --

Air Force Global Strike Command welcomed more than 250 men and women to the 2017 Women's Leadership Symposium March 13-15 at Barksdale Air Force Base, Louisiana.

The symposium provided female Airmen professional development through mentorship, education and networking. The attendees discussed ways to celebrate and further women in the workforce. The discussions focused on topics like heritage, diversity, and work and life balance.

"We are here to make sure we have the most diverse and inclusive Air Force possible," said Capt. Jannel Black, AFGSC arms control chief. "I've been fortunate in my career to have some amazing female mentors, but I know that not everyone has. Our main goal is to provide a lot of mentoring and networking opportunities."

Through the sharing of inspirational journeys, various guest speakers help educate attendees by engaging in three days of interactive workshops, panels, and skill-building activities, and develop discussions that focus on relevant issues in today's workplace.

"Whatever you are going through, someone has gone through it before. It is not the end of the world," said Senior Airman Zainab Alsultan, New Mexico Air National Guard and an Iraqi native. "Where I came from, there is no such thing as women in the military. This symposium gives me the benefit of interacting with women from other career fields around the Air Force. This is an opportunity for me to meet new mentors and friends, and renew a sense of responsibility."

Maj. Frances Mercado, AFGSC international affairs officer said this effort started at the 20th Air Force and progressed to the major command level, providing Airmen from many global strike units the opportunity to attend. This year's Women's Leadership Symposium was created to ensure women continue to bring their skills to a more diverse culture.

Airmen who participated in the event expressed enthusiasm and a desire to see this symposium continue in the future. In closing, speakers encouraged participants to return to their units to educate other Airmen and make positive cultural changes in their work environments.
