Dunford urges new AF officers to lead in Academy graduation address

JIM GARAMONE | DOD NEWS, DEFENSE MEDIA ACTIVITY

WASHINGTON, (AFNS) -- While the new officers of the U.S. Air Force Academy's Class of 2017 must never stop learning, it's time to lead, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said at graduation ceremonies in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Marine Corps Gen. Joe Dunford thanked the 979 graduates for answering the call to duty in a very challenging time.

"The world changed when you were about 5 years old, and we've been at war now for almost 16 years," he said. "Today, there are more than 100,000 Airmen standing watch around the world. Many are directly supporting combat operations and are joined by thousands more Soldiers, Sailors and Marines."

The general stressed the priority for the new officers changed today with their commissioning oath. "The focus is not on you anymore. It is not about your GPA, your MPA or your PEA," he said, referring to their grade point average, military performance and physical education averages. "It's not about the superintendent's pin on your uniform, and it's not about your accomplishments on the athletic field.

"After today, your success is seldom going to be measured by what you as an individual can achieve," he continued. "Mostly it will be about what your squadron achieves. And it is going to be how you inspire those you lead to excellence that matters."

Willingness to embrace, lead change

Flexibility is going to be key to any success the young officers will have in the service, Dunford said. "As you drive out the South Gate this afternoon, you need to do so with a willingness to embrace and lead change," he said.

Dunford, who was commissioned in 1977, said flexibility is required because of the pace of change in the world. "In my own career, I can't think of a time when the pace of change is even close to what it is today," he said.

When he entered active duty, the chairman said, the Marines were still outfitted in cold-weather gear from the Korean War. "Our radios, our rifles and our machine guns were leftovers from Vietnam, he said. "The jeeps would have been familiar to World War II veterans, and to be quite honest with you, so would the tactics."

No more. From clothing to aircraft to command-and-control systems, service members are breaking new ground and that is driving strategy and tactics, Dunford said. "In the past four years, the world's greatest Air Force has tripled the number of remotely piloted aircraft," he added.

The service made similar advancements in space and command-and-control systems, as well as in cyber stealth and precision capabilities, he noted. The Air Force fielded the F-22 Raptor and is now fielding the F-35A Lightning II.

"The pace of change is not going to stop when you graduate," Dunford said. "By the time that you make major, the United States Air Force is going to look much different even than it does today."

That kind of change will require a lifelong pursuit of education, he said, but one aspect of the military profession hasn't changed.

Human, not hardware, determines success

"At the end of the day, the military profession is about people," the general said.

"The primary difference between success and failure on and off the battlefield has historically been about the human, not about the hardware. Notwithstanding all the changes in our profession ... I believe you can primarily attribute any success that we've had on the battlefield in our history to the actions of individual Sailors, Soldiers, Airmen and Marines. Their willingness to go out day after day and do what must be done has made the difference."

That willingness doesn't come from doctrine, techniques or new weapons systems or equipment, Dunford told the graduating class. "The will to endure when the going gets tough, the willingness to put yourself at risk and to put the needs of your wingman ahead of your own -- all that comes from intangibles," he said.

The chairman quoted a World War I Marine who, when speaking of the dedication of the Marines in the regiment, spoke of "such things that regiments hand down forever." He told the young Air Force officers to think of it as "such things that squadrons hand down forever."

"I am referring to qualities like courage, honor, commitment, loyalty and selflessness," Dunford said.

Ordinary Airmen accomplishing extraordinary things

Dunford gave the graduates two examples of ordinary Airmen who accomplished extraordinary things. He spoke of Richard Brims, a 1971 Air Force Academy graduate who earned the Air Force Cross for his actions in rescuing the crew of the SS Mayaguez in May 1975 after it was seized by the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia. Brims and his squadron were dispatched to rescue the ship and the crew of 39. Their job was to insert 200 Marines on the nearby island of Koh Tang.

The Khmer Rouge heavily defended the island, and the Marines and Airmen were met by a buzz saw. Soon, 11 helicopters were downed, leaving only three to extract the Marines left on the island. Brims returned to the landing zone twice.

"On his last trip, Lieutenant Brims made three unsuccessful attempts to land," Dunford said. "The Marines on the island tried to wave him off, saying it was too dangerous for him to land. But he wasn't going to leave those Marines. He landed and loaded 27 Marines."

He held his position under fire while one of his crewmen ran to the tree line to grab two other Marines who were laying down a base of suppressive fire to allow the evacuation to take place. "He is justly remembered as a hero," the general said. "But that hero sat right where you sit today. He walked the same halls, and he studied the same subjects. He's the same guy who was pulling pranks on graduation day. He was an ordinary Airman who did extraordinary things."

Heroism in Afghanistan
Dunford told the new officers they don't have to look far back for examples, citing Maj. Alex Hill, who was commissioned in 2006. In November, Hill commanded an AC-130 gunship called Spooky 43. It was providing overwatch for a team of 55 American and Afghan special operators that was ambushed and surrounded. Within minutes, the team took 20 casualties.

Vice chief addresses need to modernize nuclear triad

TECH. SGT. ROBERT BARNETT | SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force Gen. Stephen Wilson discussed the state of the nuclear triad during a Mitchell Institute breakfast at the Capitol Hill Club in Washington, D.C., May 25, 2017.

The Air Force maintains two legs of the nuclear triad, including aircraft capable of carrying nuclear weapons, more than 400 intercontinental ballistic missiles, 75 percent of the nuclear command, control and communication that connects the president to senior military leaders and approximately 30,000 Airmen maintaining this capability.

"Strategic stability is the key term I want to emphasize today, what we need as a backdrop against what other nations are doing," Wilson said.

Air Force leadership continue to advocate for stable, predictable budgets to ensure Airmen receive the updated equipment they need to modernize the nuclear triad, he explained.

"The budget is certainly a step in the right direction; it helps us move forward on our readiness recovery," he continued. "We hope to have a predictable, flexible budget going forward."

To ensure the nuclear triad is responsive, survivable, flexible and visible, the Air Force plans upgrades that include replacing the ground-based strategic deterrent missile with the Minuteman III; advancing the development of the B-21 Raider to provide critical flexibility across a wide range of joint military operations with long-range, large mixed payloads and survivability; and upgrading to the long range standoff missile that will be compatible with all nuclear-capable bombers.

"Today's modernization is tomorrow's readiness," he said. "We don't control the future, but we need to be ready for it. Our nuclear forces will continue to play an important role for our nation."

Enemies are closing the advantage gap fast, and Wilson isn't interested in a fair fight.

"I don't want to win 36 to 33 - I want to win 100 to nothing," he said.

"To do that, we have to maintain an advantage, we have to maintain a strong nuclear capability."

PRAIRIE ADVENTURES

BY PATRICIA STOCKDILL

"It was odd. It seemed unusual to have such wild (weather) swings."

- N.D. Game and Fish Department Wildlife Division Chief Jeb Williams discussing how winter played a role in the state's deer population and the number of available licenses in 2017.

With deer gun and muzzleloader applications due June 7, let's take a moment to review the past winter and what it means for the state's hunters.

Quick, does anyone remember November?

That balmy month that seemed more akin to September than not. Until, that is, the Sunday after Thanksgiving arrived.

And so did the snow. Depending on where one lives in North Dakota that signaled the beginning of a totally forgettable month when it comes to weather and getting outside.

Storm after storm pounded several areas of the state, culminating in what may, in the future, simply be referred to as "the Christmas Blizzard." Years from now people will simply nod their head, recalling the misery of the "the Christmas Blizzard."

It didn't take long for folks to begin worrying about wildlife.

But then something funny happened: With North Dakota weather doing what it often does, which is turn on a dime; winter went from a lion to a sweet little pussycat. "We had a horrible December, we did not have a horrible winter," N.D. Game and Fish Department Wildlife Division Chief Jeb Williams described. "The (weather) swings were definitely pretty wild."

Yes, even though it seems North Dakota's mantra is "if you don't like the weather, wait 5 minutes and it will change" folks have to admit this winter had its share of weather rollercoaster rides.

From a deer's perspective, that was a good thing because had December's weather continued into January and February, the scenario would have been greatly different this spring than what it appears is the case.

The January and February weather reprieve gave wildlife a reprieve.

Also, if there was something good about December's snowfall – other than soil moisture – it was that it allowed the Game and Fish Department to conduct good white-tailed deer aerial surveys. With snow blanketing much of the state, deer show up better and it's easier to get population trend estimates. The exception was southeastern North Dakota, which lacked good snow cover for surveys.

Biologists and pilots conducted a follow-up March aerial survey, which indicated about 10 to 15 percent mortality. That number of deer lost during winter mirrors on ongoing study of radio collared whitetail deer, Williams continued. "That's not all that abnormal," he added.

The caveat to the good news that deer survival appears to be better than anticipated given December's horrific weather conditions is tempered though. Biologists don't yet know its impact on fawn reproduction.

In the meantime, the winter weather reprieve and the fact that deer mortality likely wasn't as extensive as it could have been gave the Game and Fish Department enough confidence to bolster the number of deer gun licenses in 2017 by 5,000.

Much of the increase was in western North Dakota's mule deer country, where muley populations continue rebounding. The 2016- 2017 winter wasn't as harsh there as it was elsewhere in North Dakota. Coupled with a conservative harvest management strategy, all but one unit is open for both antlered and antlerless mule deer licenses – the first in several years. "Winter weather plays a hugely critical role for mule deer even more so than whitetails. They're a fairly sensitive species," Williams added.

PIRATES OF THE CARIBBEAN:
DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

(PG-13)

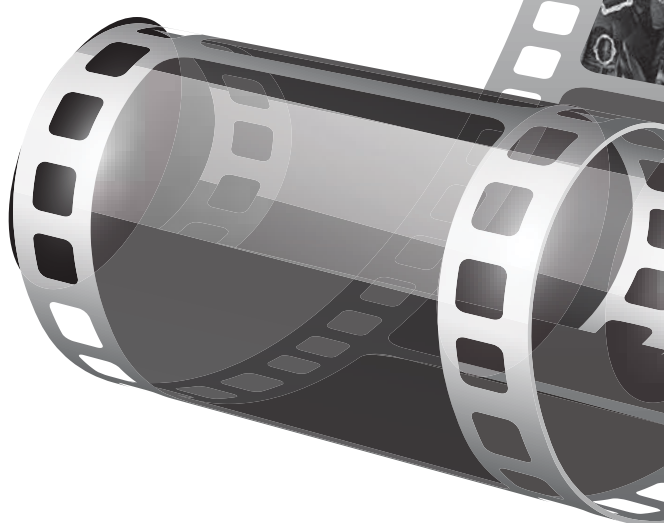

FRIDAY, MAY 26 • 1800

SATURDAY, MAY 27

1500 – 1800

SUNDAY, MAY 28 • 1500

“Captain Jack Sparrow finds the winds of ill-fortune blowing even more strongly when deadly ghost pirates led by his old nemesis, the terrifying Captain Salazar, escape from the Devil's Triangle, determined to kill every pirate at sea...including him. Captain Jack's only hope of survival lies in seeking out the legendary Trident of Poseidon, a powerful artifact that bestows upon its possessor total control over the seas.”

Fresh Strawberry Pie Bites

INGREDIENTS:

Homemade All Butter Pie Crust or 2 pre-made, ready to roll pie crusts
4-6 cups fresh strawberries, chopped and hulled
1 cup water
1 cup sugar
1 3oz. box of Strawberry Jell-O
3 tablespoons of cornstarch
Whipped Cream

INSTRUCTIONS:

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour (or use nonstick cooking spray) a mini-muffin pan. Set aside. Roll the dough or pie crust out on a floured surface with a floured rolling pin. Using a round cookie or biscuit cutter (approximately 3 inches diameter) cut at least 24 rounds out (or 12 rounds of each pie crust, if using store bought). Carefully press each round into the mini-muffin pan. Use your fingers to round the ends into a pie crust. Brush egg wash from one egg to the top edges of each pie. Bake for 15-20 minutes or until golden around the edges. Remove from oven and let the crust cool while you make the filling. Once cooled, use the tip of a knife to loosen the crusts from the mini muffin cups, but keep them in the pan. Put the water, sugar and cornstarch in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Whisk constantly until it become thick. For about 3 minutes. Then whisk in the Jell-O and cook for a minute longer. Remove from the heat and let cool for about 10-15min. As the glaze cools, place strawberries straight into the mini pie crusts. Pour the glaze over the strawberries. Refrigerate until set. Decorate with whipped cream before serving. Keep refrigerated.

One Pan Balsamic Chicken and Veggies

INGREDIENTS:

2/3 cup balsamic vinegar
2/3 cup zesty Italian dressing fat free is great
1.25 pounds chicken tenders or breasts
2 heads broccoli
1 cup baby carrots
1/2 pint cherry tomatoes
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

INSTRUCTIONS:

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees F. Spray a large tray with non-stick spray (line with parchment paper if you tray isn't already nonstick or the balsamic + Italian mixture will stick to it) and set aside. Whisk together the balsamic vinegar and zesty Italian dressing. Trim the tenderloins of fat and undesired parts. Alternatively cut the breasts into small 1/4th-1/2th inch thick pieces (resemble the size of the tenders in the picture/video) Place 1/3 cup of the balsamic + Italian mixture in a large bag and add the chicken tenders. Coat and place in the fridge to marinate for at least 30 minutes and up to 6 hours. Chop the broccoli into small pieces. Slice the baby carrots in half. Place broccoli + carrots on the prepared tray with the cherry tomatoes (like your tomatoes LESS roasted? Toss in after 5-10 minutes of the broccoli and carrots being cooked. Otherwise they are ultra tender!), Italian seasoning, olive oil, garlic powder, and add some seasoned salt and pepper to taste. Roast the veggies for 10-15 minutes. Remove from the oven and flip around. Section the veggies to each side of the tray (see video) and place the chicken tenders (discard marinade) in the center. Brush 1/3 cup of the balsamic + Italian mixture over the chicken. Return to the oven and cook for another 7-15 minutes depending on the size of your chicken. Be careful to monitor the chicken so you don't overcook it.The cooking time will largely vary based on the size of your chicken. See the last paragraph of text for more direction on how to cook this meal so everything is done at the same time. Serve the chicken and veggies with the remaining Balsamic + Italian mixture. Top with freshly chopped parsley if desired. Great served over rice or quinoa!

A Cacophony of Creation! Annual Summer Art Camp at the Taube Museum

TAUBE MUSEUM OF ART

Looking for that summer activity to bring out the creativity in your children? The Taube Museum of Art is offering their Annual Summer Art Camp June 26-29, with two sessions to choose from: 9am - 12 pm or 1 pm - 4 pm. This camp is open to children ages 5 and up. Artcamp registrations are now being accepted online at www.taubemuseum.org. Your child will learn about contemporary artists and their techniques, and so much more! Local artist, Carol Fielhaber, will have her paintings on exhibit in the Lower Gallery at the Taube Museum of Art during this week. She will be present to give an 'artist talk' to the children on the second day of class! What a treat! This is an art camp for children interested in a hands-on experience with the visual arts. Experienced art educators will work with your children developing their art skills. Fees for 12 hours of art instruction are only $100 for nonmembers and $95 for members.

An additional 27 summer art classes are being offered, which will begin the first week of June and run all summer through August, so there is sure to be a class that will tempt your child to be inspired!

Summer Reading Program Kicks Off June 10th At Base Library

It's almost time for Summer Reading. The Base Library's Summer Reading Program will run from Saturday, June 10 to Saturday, August 12 and is open to all ages from infants to adults. This year's theme is "Read by Design," so get ready for Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts, and Mathematics.

The Summer Reading Program starts with a Kick-off Party at 1:00 PM on Saturday, June 10 featuring games, crafts, and a puppet show as well as an opportunity to register for the Summer Reading Program.

Participants can register for the Summer Reading Program at the Library between June 10 and July 31 or register themselves online at <http://tinyurl.com/MinotLibrary> from June 10 to July 31. While supplies last, everyone who registers at the Library will receive a t-shirt.

It doesn't matter what you read or how quickly you can read it; what matters is the amount of time you spend reading. Any reading improves literacy and studies show that children who read recreationally out-perform those who don't.

There are a lot of prizes available for readers to earn including prizes for reading a particular number of hours and opportunities to win grand prizes. Participants can earn grand prize drawing slips by reading or by earning badges by participating in particular activities like attending library programs, making things, participating in a variety of competitions at the library, and more. Each age group has its own badge-book that specifies which and how many badges can be earned for each activity. Prizes have been provided by the DoD and through sponsorship from the Minot AFB Officers' Spouses' Club. No Federal Endorsement of Sponsors Intended.

There will be programs all summer long for all age groups. Highlights include: a weekly STEM program for older kids and teens on Tuesdays, a "Bad Art Night" program for adults and teens on July 6th, a Board Game Making Camp for older kids and teens in July, a Story Walk on July 8th, and more. Check out the Library's Facebook page (Minot Air Force Base Library) for program details.

The Base Library is challenging the base's squadrons to a competition to see which squadron participates the most in the Summer Reading Program. The squadron with the most active duty members participating in the Base Library's Summer Reading Program will receive an award certificate and the right to display the Summer Reading Program Squadron Trophy for a year. 705 MUNS won the competition in both 2014 and 2015, and 742 MS won the competition in 2016.

The Summer Reading Program will end with a wrap-up party at 1:00 PM on Saturday, August 12. Last year, Minot AFB logged more reading time than any other base in the Air Force (1.9 Million minutes). For more information, call the Base Library at 723-3344.

Create A Memory During The Parent & Child Luau Event

Everyone's life is full of unforgettable memories: graduation from school, the day you got married, the birth of your child, and more; all have special places in your heart. The Jimmy Doolittle Center is providing parents and their children an opportunity to add another wonderful event to their memories during the Parent & Child Luau event on Thursday, June 15. The event will be held at the Doolittle Center from 5:30-8 p.m.

The Parent & Child Luau provides fathers a chance to share an evening with their daughter or mothers an opportunity to enjoy time with their son. This year's event features a "Luau" theme and includes dinner, music, dancing, and making memories. Tickets also provide each child with a complimentary lei as well as a create your own necklace to take home.

The menu for the Parent & Child Luau has been designed to fit the tastes of the young attendees and includes a chocolate fountain and pineapple upside down cake. Participants can participate in a limbo contest and show off their moves in the dance off.

Tickets for the Parent & Child Luau are on sale now at the Doolittle Center. Cost is $30 per couple (dad and daughter or mom and son) for club members and $35 per couple for non-members. Each additional child is $10, for parents with more than one child. A limited number of tickets are available for this event so purchase your tickets early. Tickets must be purchased by June 9, 2017.

The Parent & Child Luau is sponsored in part by Coldwell Banker - 1st Minot Realty and Watne Realtors. No Federal Endorsement of Sponsor Intended. For additional information, contact the Jimmy Doolittle Center at 723-3731.

FREE Admission For Club Members To UFC Fight Night

Club members receive FREE admission to the UFC 212 pay-per-view event at Rockers Bar & Grill on Saturday, June 3. Non-members price is only $7.

The action features the UFC Featherweight Championship unification bout between current two-time champion José Aldo and current interim champion Max Holloway. In the co-main event, Claudia Gadelha faces Karolina Kowalkiewicz in a women's Strawweight match-up.

AF rolls out fiscal 2018 space budget

STAFF SGT. JANNELLE MCRAE
SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- Air Force leaders met with media to discuss specifics of the service's fiscal 2018 space investment budget at the Pentagon May 24, 2017. The request totals $7.75 billion, an approximately 20 percent increase from fiscal year 2017.

Dr. David Hardy, the acting deputy undersecretary of the Air Force for space, and Maj. Gen. Roger Teague, the director of space programs for the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Acquisition, highlighted the importance of the fiscal 2018 space budget to the nation's security and the Air Force's strategic understanding of the space environment.

According to Hardy, for decades, the U.S. has enjoyed unimpeded freedom of action in the space domain. However, the global space domain is evolving and in the not too distant future, near-peer competitors will have the ability to put U.S. space assets at risk.

"As in every other domain, when an adversary understands that something provides a strategic advantage they do two things...mirror our capabilities and work strenuously to figure out means by which they can deny us," said Hardy. "You can summarize the progress we have made over the last three budget cycles by saying we really do have a much firmer understanding of all the component parts that are required to build an overall resilient enterprise."

The Air Force's fiscal 2018 space budget emphasizes investments and improvements in future technology in three major focus areas: space superiority, space support to operations and assured access to space.

Teague explained the focus areas emphasize developing the resilient capabilities the Air Force needs to negate adversary actions and ensure America maintains the critical space capabilities required for national security.

"Space is increasingly congested and contested," he said. "With this evolving and changing environment, it's increasingly critical we must ensure that our capabilities, our future capabilities, outpace the advances in space threats."

To gain and maintain space superiority, the Air Force plans to increase investments in advanced space situational awareness, counterspace and command and control. In addition, the service is committed to the continuation of investments in the Space Fence.

"All of these capabilities are going to continue to enhance our ability to understand our operational environment," Teague said. "We need to be able to command and control our space forces and capabilities to preserve freedom of operations as well as freedom of maneuver."

The Air Force's space support to operations is integral to combat, mobility and nuclear forces. The budget reflects this role with support to programs including the Space-Based Infrared System, Space Modernization Initiative, Tech Maturation and Cyber Security, space-based environmental monitoring and modernization of protected satellite communications.

To ensure the Air Force's ability to continue to own the high ground, the space budget provides funding for infrastructure, studies and analysis for the three evolved expendable launch vehicle launch services, which are competitive launch opportunities. The Air Force has a total of six launches planned for fiscal 2018.

Teague said the Air Force will continue to evolve the space enterprise to be more flexible, survivable and resilient to ensure the capability to provide space superiority across the spectrum of conflict for tomorrow's highly contested environment.

"We must, as the (chief of staff of the Air Force) has emphasized several times, normalize space as a warfighting domain and focus our efforts to outpace and defeat advanced, demonstrated and evolving threats," said Teague. "(The) increases in investment will continue to be necessary to maintain our space superiority and our capabilities in FY 18 and in the future."

interoperability

"The primary objective for us is to work together with our partner nations and allies to increase our interoperability capabilities as a force," said Lt. Col. Jason Zumwalt, the 493rd FS commander.

Zumwalt added, "These practice opportunities and experiences allow our pilots and maintainers to work together side-by-side with our partners and allies to plan, execute and debrief some very complex missions. That allows us to see how we can better work together in the future."

Over the next two weeks, Arctic Challenge participants will conduct live-flying events to train on offensive and defensive air combat operations. They will practice evaluating aircraft, personnel and weapons capabilities, as well as mobilizing and training in multinational operations.

Working together "Being able to work closely, face to face, side by side, and coordinate our actions together to achieve a common goal provides excellent training for everyone involved," Zumwalt said.

Through training exercises like Arctic Challenge, the U.S., allies and partner nations can build on their expertise in the air, creating a credible force prepared to effectively respond to any crisis together.

Hill and his crew launched into action and began firing at the enemy, mostly within about 40 yards of friendly forces – the very definition of the term "Danger Close."

Their actions allowed the ground forces to regroup, but didn't halt the enemy. Eventually, the gunship was shooting within 15 yards of the friendly forces. "In total, Spooky 43 fired 21 Danger Close missions that day and saved over 50 lives on the ground," Dunford said.

It was an impressive team achievement, and people can read about the mission on the Internet. But what the write-up doesn't say is it was the first deployment for four of the crew members, and the first combat mission for one of them. It doesn't say that one of the sensor operators missed the crew brief that day because the major let him go off to see the video teleconference of a memorial service for one of his fellow Airmen. It doesn't say that one of the loadmasters was being treated for combat stress because he had a close encounter with a surface-to-air missile one year prior, right where that action took place, Dunford said.

"You won't read that when Major Hill landed to rearm and refuel, he put his hand on each of his crewmen and looked them in the eyes to see if they were OK," the general said. "He also asked them, 'Can you go back?' None of them hesitated. They all went back."

"Maj. Hill's crew performed that day not because he was a major, but because he was a leader with a warrior ethos. [Hill is] a leader who was technically and tactically competent, but also a leader who trusted and cared for his Airmen and earned their trust in return."

Leading from the front Brims and Hill epitomize the idea that it wasn't about them and their individual actions, the nation's top military officer told the graduates. "It was about the Marines on Koh Tank Island and the special operators on the ground in Afghanistan," Dunford said. "It was about the crews. Your predecessors knew that individual competence, intellect and physical skills are all actually part of the sticker price for being an officer. You're not going to get any more credit for that after today. It is a given."

Those officers knew it was about leading from the front and instilling spirit in their units and a bond of trust within their crews, along with a commitment to excellence and to the mission, Dunford said.

"What's going to distinguish you as a leader is not your ability to develop cyber tools, fly a joint strike fighter or maintain satellite constellation – we expect you to do all that. You're graduates of the United States Air Force Academy," Dunford said.

"What is going to distinguish you as a leader is your personal example," he told the new officers. "Your ability to create an environment where those intangible qualities I spoke about -- those qualities that are passed down from one generation of Airmen to the next -- your task is to build an environment where those qualities flourish."

SAFESITTER

2017 Summer Class Schedule

May 31 • June 12 • June 27 • June 29

July 10 • July 13 • July 17 • July 20 • August 3

Safe Sitter® teaches adolescent babysitters how to handle crises, how to keep their charges secure, and how to nurture and guide a young child. Safe Sitter® babysitters help children stay safe and sound while their parents are away. In the process, these 11 years old and older emerge as more confident, responsible and compassionate teens and adults.

During this one-day course, students listen, practice, role-play—and learn an array of topics including:

- Choking and CPR
- Safety for the sitter
- Accident management
- The business of babysitting
- Child development
- CPR

All classes are held 8:30 am to 3:30 pm

Trinity's Health Center – Riverside, Education Center, 1900 8th Avenue SE

Due to the high demand for this class, the course fee of $50 must be paid in advance. Please register by calling the Trinity Health Community Education Department at 857-5099 and then mail your check (payable to Trinity Health) to Trinity Health Community Education, P.O. Box 5020, Minot, ND 58702.

AF presents fiscal year 2018 budget

SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- The Air Force presented its fiscal year 2018 president's budget request May 23, 2017, following the Defense Department and sister services' budget briefings.

Maj. Gen. Jim Martin, the Air Force budget director, said the request supports the Secretary of Defense's commitment to strengthening the U.S. military by improving warfighting readiness and addressing critical shortfalls while building a larger, more capable and more lethal joint force.

The Air Force requested a top-line budget of $132.4 billion in Air Force-controlled funding that invests primarily in Airmen, readiness, nuclear deterrence operations, space and cyber capabilities, combat Air Forces and infrastructure.

This budget serves as a step forward in the Air Force's readiness recovery. Martin said recovery will take years, and success requires relief of Budget Control Act caps coupled with predictable, sufficient and flexible budgets.

The budget supports a Total Force end-strength of 502,000 personnel, increasing the active force by 4,100 and the Guard and Reserves by 1,700.

For the Total Force, the budget supports:

- A 2.1 percent pay raise for active-duty Airmen and a 1.9 percent pay raise for civilian personnel.
- The addition of approximately 200 recruiters while sustaining more basic and technical training instructors who will support more than 29,000 enlisted accessions.
- Increasing pilot training capacity and adjusting their incentive pay structure.
- Increasing maintenance manpower and experience.
- Reducing gaps in critical skill areas such as nuclear, cyber, intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance and the remotely piloted aircraft communities.
- Adding more than 200 military and 961 civilian personnel to support the chief of staff of the Air Force priority to reinvigorate squadrons and improve commander support staff manning across the Air Force, alleviating Airmen from administrative duties and increasing overall readiness.

In readiness, the budget

funds:

- Flying hours to executable levels and weapons system sustainment to near capacity.
 - Two additional F-16 training squadrons and ensures advance weapons schools and combat exercises are fully funded to restore full-spectrum readiness long term.
 - 60 RPA combat lines.
 - The Intercontinental Ballistic Missile Program.
 - The National Space Defense Center.
 - 39 cyber teams and training for cyber Airmen.
- Top modernization programs.
- The space procurement strategy.
 - The nuclear enterprise.
 - Munitions to support ongoing operations.
 - Replenishing current inventories.

Delaying modernization has become a trend in recent years, allowing potential adversaries to narrow the capability gap. This budget addresses modernization by:

- Advancing recapitalization of the current fighter and tanker fleets by procuring 46 F-35A Lightning and 15 KC-46 Pegasus aircraft.
- Continuing modernization efforts for our 4th and 5th generation aircraft.

- Continuing efforts from fiscal 2017 to maximize munition production capacity to sustain global precision attack capabilities.

The fiscal 2018 Air Force space investment budget request addresses the development of resilient capabilities and architectures to negate or defeat threats. The budget supports funding the Space-Based Infrared System, Space Modernization Initiative, Tech Maturation and Cyber Security, modernization of protected satellite communications and development and fielding of space battle management command and control. The request also funds three evolved expendable launch vehicle launch services, which are competitive launch opportunities.

The research, development, test and evaluation investments saw notable growth this year and are designed to pay significant future dividends through game-changing technologies that, when fielded, will increase lethality and provide the joint force a technological advantage.

To ensure the service's nuclear forces remain capable and credible, this budget provides funding for future nuclear capabilities with significant increases to the long range standoff weapon and ground based strategic deterrent, to include ICBM guidance, propulsion, security and command and control applications.

The proposal also invests further in the adaptive engine transition program, which will deliver revolutionary, next-generation propulsion systems for multiple combat aircraft applications. It develops the fleet of tomorrow by ramping up funding for the next generation bomber, maintains commitment to the next generation flight trainer for future Air Force pilots and continues development for the combat rescue helicopter.

"The demand for current and future air and space power exceeds supply," Martin said. "The Air Force's FY18 budget is our best attempt to apply our limited resources to build a more capable and lethal force. One that is ready today, and one that is ready tomorrow."
