Wright eyes indefinite enlistment, awards program changes for enlisted force

AIR MOBILITY COMMAND PUBLIC AFFAIRS

ORLANDO, Fla. -- The Air Force's top enlisted Airman provided updates on the status of issues affecting the enlisted force Oct. 27, 2017, at the 2017 Airlift/Tanker Association Symposium in Orlando, Florida.

Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force Kaleth O. Wright addressed hundreds of mobility Airmen, current and former Air Force leaders, joint and combined forces partners and industry representatives, as part of the three day professional development event focused on the rapid global mobility enterprise and the Airmen who execute the mission.

Wright's remarks highlighted initiatives nearing completion and fielding, such as adjustments to awards program timing and process requirements. He also brought news of options, like a possible indefinite enlistment timeline, which are earlier in the consideration process.

He began by addressing the culture of Air Force units and how leadership and the establishment of positive culture impacts retention. Retention of enlisted aircraft maintainers and other Airmen with skills key to operational success remains a significant challenge and focus in the Air Force and in Air Mobility Command specifically.

"My question to you is, 'how do we keep them?'" Wright said. "Not just how do we retain them, but how do we keep them motivated, how do we keep them encouraged, how do we keep them inspired? Because that's how they come to us. They come to us motivated, encouraged, inspired, agile, innovative, ready to roll. They come to us feeling a sense of connection. They come to us feeling a sense of purpose."

"But, somewhere along the way, something happens," he said. "Some of it has to do with the nature of our business; some of it has to do with our extremely high ops tempo, which I don't perceive decreasing any time soon. Some of it has to do with what we as an Air Force have to get after: some of the additional duties, computer-based training, and moving things out of the way. We are doing a lot of work in that arena. But most of it has to do with the level of leadership and encouragement you provide... the environment you create as leaders in our Air Force. That's how we get Airmen to stay, how we keep them motivated and inspired. That's how we keep them resilient; how we utilize them and keep them thinking and being innovative."

Wright then provided updates on the ongoing changes intended to reduce administrative burden, increase mission focus, give Airmen time back and enhance quality of life. Noting that upon return to the Pentagon, one of the first things he has to do is arrange to reenlist, Wright received a round of applause from the gathered Airmen.

"Don't clap," he said with a smile. "I've been in the Air Force 28 years, almost 29. And every four years, I've got to go through the 'Yeah, I'm still here.' Now, it's a time-honored tradition; I love it, but I think we'd like to get to once you hit your 15-year mark, then you're an indefinite enlistment -- you're good until your high year of tenure. If you have a selective reenlistment bonus or something, we'll make sure you have the right active duty service commitment. Because I believe at 15 years of service, most of us are plugged in, dedicated and ready to roll. We're still doing the research. We like to go slow to go fast to make sure we understand all of the benefits."

A topic closer to fruition is reduction of the time needed to produce an awards nomination, as well as adjusting the weight of mission focus and job performance on the forms.

"We're really close on our goal of reducing the number of lines on our [awards packages] for the annual awards program," Wright said, noting the current number of 27 bulleted accomplishments required for a nomination. "So we'll get that down to about 16. I like 12 and four. So 12 in job performance and then four in the 'Whole Airman' concept. That gets us to the point where 80 percent of what you're evaluated on is your job and primary mission, and 20 percent is the other things that we ask you to do as Airmen."

Once that change is official, Wright said he hopes major commands and other earlier levels of competition will follow suit and mirror the requirements at the Air Force level.

As Wright expressed his commitment to looking for ways, along with Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. David L. Goldfein and Secretary of the Air Force Heather Wilson, to recruit, train, motivate and retain the Airmen critical to conducting operations and delivering hope around the globe, he challenged the A/TA audience members as well.

"Here's one thing I would ask you to focus on: be committed. Be committed to our Airmen, be committed to our Air Force, be committed to being great leaders. Be committed to being great Wingmen. Reach deep down inside and recommit yourself to this Air Force and to these Airmen," Wright said. "They need you and they deserve you. Because they want to be committed to you. And so of all the things that I can ask you to do, and there's a lot -- the one thing I would ask you is to decide. You can't be on the fence. Because Airmen know it and they see it. At the end of the day, attitude truly reflects leadership."

In conclusion, Wright channeled the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius with a slight adjustment of the emperor's famous quote.

"Don't waste your time arguing about what a good Airman should be. Be one!"

North Dakota Property Listed in National Register of Historic Places

STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF NORTH DAKOTA

BISMARCK, N.D. – A former church building in Lakota has been listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The National Register of Historic Places is the federal government’s list of properties it considers worthy of preservation and recognition.

The Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in Lakota was designed by George Hancock with close collaboration from Bishop William D. Walker and built between 1884 and 1886. This stone church is an excellent example of the High Victorian Gothic/Second Gothic Revival architectural style. In addition to its architecture, this church represents the progressive cultural presence of the British gentry who promoted the town and sponsored building the first school in Lakota along with this church.

Contrary to some misconceptions about the National Register program, listing in it does not prevent owners from altering their property, restrict the use or sale of the property, or require establishing times that the property must be open to the public. Entry into the National Register of Historic Places does give a property prestige, provides protection from adverse effects in federally assisted projects, and provides eligibility for certain preservation financial incentives.

For more information about the National Register program in North Dakota, contact Architectural Historian Lorna Meidinger, State Historical Society of North Dakota, at 701.328.2089 or find information online at history.nd.gov.

PRAIRIE ADVENTURES

BY PATRICIA STOCKDILL

– N.D. Game and Fish Department wildlife veterinarian Dan Grove.

Deer season for 40,000-plus hunters gets underway Nov. 10 and the million-dollar question is...how well are you up on your safe game handling procedures?

OK, a person has a clean cutting surface and clean knives.

However, safe handling of wild meat goes far beyond keeping things clean and deer hair out of sausage trimmings.

Part of the reason is to ensure tasty meat.

The other reason is that some wildlife diseases are transmittable to humans. Consider bovine tuberculosis (TB), which originated in domestic livestock. It can be transmitted to wildlife species such as coyotes, deer, and elk.

And, if one isn’t careful, it can be transmitted to humans handling infected animals. “Basically, what it comes down to is there are diseases (in wildlife) to be aware of,” explained N.D. Game and Fish Department wildlife veterinarian Dan Grove.

As an example, Grove only has to point to neighboring South Dakota: A recent outbreak of bovine TB occurred in several livestock in northwestern South Dakota, prompting S.D. Game, Fish, and Parks Department to test an array of wildlife species in the region. None of the animals – coyotes, raccoons, pronghorn, and deer – tested positive for the disease.

Over in North Dakota, the Game and Fish Department has tested for bovine TB over the course of many years and it has never been identified in wildlife in North Dakota.

Tuberculosis is an example of why it’s important to handle wild game safely. Bacteria is another reason. It starts with in the field handling to prevent bacterial contamination by keeping the carcass clean of water, mud, soil, and leaves – all of which carry bacteria.

Field dress the animal in as clean of an area as possible and cover it during transportation, keeping the carcass elevated from the metal of a pickup box.

Wash hands with warm water and use clean equipment and knives when field dressing. Try not to have clothing, which also can carry bacteria, contact the carcass.

Wear disposable gloves and in the event you cut yourself, immediately clean the cut.

Wash knives after field dressing or if cutting through anything “odd-looking,” Grove described.

Grove offers his washing technique when he works with wild game: Use hot, soapy water, rinse, soak utensils with a solution of 10 percent bleach – or hand sanitizer – for 5 to 10 minutes, and rinse.

He also suggests using knives with plastic or metal handles. Being porous, wooden handles can harbor things a person doesn’t want harbored, plus they’re harder to clean. Havel’s makes a knife system with disposable, surgical quality blades with plastic or metal handles and are Grove’s go-to choice when cutting and processing wild game.

Hunters – and the public – should stay away from sick or dead animals. People can report such sightings to a local game warden or the Game and Fish Department.

In many instances, it’s difficult to find a sick animal again or determine cause of death when carcasses aren’t fresh, however.

The Game and Fish Department provides an array of game preparation and safety tips on its website, (gf.nd.gov/wildlife/diseases/safety-tips).

Also, more information about wildlife diseases is available from their website link, (gf.nd.gov/wildlife/diseases/index).

The booklet, “Diseases of North Dakota Fish and Wildlife” can be downloaded from that link or is available in pocketbook form from the Game and Fish Department.

NORTH HILL BAPTIST CHURCH

Invites the Community to “The Star: A Journey to Christmas” Minot – Everyone in the community is invited to attend North Hill Baptist Church for an advent sermon series based on the themes of Hope, Love, Joy and Peace called The Star: A Journey to Christmas, at 1030 am Sunday mornings. It’s the most wonderful time of the year, or so the old song goes. Yet it doesn’t always feel that way—the hectic holiday schedule, family pressures, and emotional wounds are just a few reasons. But North Hill Baptist sees the Christmas season as one that offers a unique opportunity to experience God’s love and grace in the midst of real life. Just like that first Christmas when Mary and Joseph took the long trip to Bethlehem and the Savior of the world was born in an unexpected way, God shows up surprisingly in our lives today and in ways we often least expect on our journeys. In a season often marked by frenzied busyness, it is also an opportunity to set aside time to prepare our hearts for the coming of Christ. This service is designed to help us place our focus on a far greater story than our own—the story of following the true light of the world. “The Star: A Journey to Christmas,” event is the perfect opportunity for families throughout the community to come together to celebrate this special day in a meaningful way. North Hill Baptist is a Southern Baptist Church located at 524 21st Ave NW in Minot, ND 58703. For more information, visit FaceBook @NHBC2016 or call 701 839 7283

THE MINOT SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

conducted by Maestro Efraín Amaya, presents "Love & War: The Human Condition" on Saturday, November 11, 2017 at 7:30 pm at MSU's Ann Nicole Nelson Hall. The Minot Symphony Orchestra will celebrate Veterans Day with an armed forces salute to open the concert. The evening will celebrate pieces that have been inspired during war time, or have become symbols of self-reflection in coping with loss. Copland wrote his well-known Fanfare for a common man in 1942 written in response to the US entry into World War II. The moving Adagio by Barber has made it into film soundtracks like Platoon and has been performed in many memorial services. In contrast, the Adagietto of Mahler's 5 symphony is one of the most love inspired pieces of music ever written. The orchestra will feature cellist Kim Cook, as she performs Maestro Amaya's original piece, Un Camino. Following intermission patrons can enjoy Prokofiev's March from his opera The Love for Three Oranges which has become a classic in concert halls. The evening will close with one of Tchaikovsky's most popular works, The 1812 Overture, written to commemorate the triumph of the Russians defending against Napoleon and his invading Grande Armée. Dr. John Fishpaw and MSU's Dr. David Rolandson will be special guest conductors. Don't miss the Minot Symphony Orchestra's armed forces salute and "Love and War: The Human Condition", part of the 2017-2018 concert series, The Wheel of Fortune. Tickets start at $25 for adults with senior and student discounts, and can be purchased online at www.minotsymphony.com or call 701-858-4228. Military tickets can be purchased at the MAFB ITT Office. The Minot Symphony Orchestra is a community orchestra that has been performing for Northwest North Dakota for 91 years. Members of the symphony include area high school students, Minot State University students, Minot State University faculty, as well as community members from a wide variety of professions. The common thread among its musicians, is the love of music and performing. For more information, please call Ellen Fenner at 701-858-4228 or email misu.symphony@ndus.edu.

AIR MUSEUM DIRECTOR SPEAKING NOV. 12 ON WWI PILOTS, PLANES

WWI book discussion set for Jan. 16 "WWI Pilots & their Planes" will be the topic of a free talk by Glenn Blackaby, director of Minot's Dakota Territory Air Museum at 2 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 12, at Prairie Village Museum, Rugby. "The airplane was in its infancy leading up to WWI," Blackaby said, "and military and political leaders saw flying as an amusing pastime with little military value." But on the battlefields of WWI, the airplane became an invaluable reconnaissance tool and gradually the airplane's role was expanded leading to the development of fighters, bombers, seaplanes and more. "Pilots became knights of the air," Blackaby said. "Fliers like Rickenbacker, Guynemer, Garros, Boelcke and Richthofen became household names and were exploited to boost civilian morale." Blackaby put his lifelong interest in aviation to work as Dakota Territory Air Museum's first full-time curator/director in 2007. Founded in 1986, the air museum tells the story of the area's aviation history through displays of dozens of military and civilian aircraft from the early 1900s to the present. Blackaby's presentation on the changing role of planes and pilots in WWI is one in a series of events being presented Prairie Village Museum, supported in part by a World War I and America grant funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and other organizations. Donuts and coffee will be served following the program by Friends of Prairie Village Museum. On Jan. 16 the museum will host its second WWI and America Community Book Discussion. Moderators Ron Montonye and Stephanie Steinke will lead a discussion of Christopher Clark's "The Sleepwalkers: How Europe went to War in 1914." The discussion will start at 7 p.m. in the museum's Old Main Gallery. Refreshments will be served. Discussion participants are responsible for securing their own copies of the book, which is available in hardback, paperback, Kindle and audio book formats. Montonye is a Vietnam Era veteran and Steinke is curating "From Ploughboys to Doughboys: WWI in the Heart of America," an exhibit scheduled to open at the museum in May 2018. For more information, visit the museum website at www.prairievillagemuseum.com or call 701-776-6414.

VETERAN'S DAY

THANK YOU FOR YOUR SERVICE

In Flanders Fields

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place: and in the sky
The larks still bravely singing fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead: Short days ago,
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved: and now we lie
In Flanders fields!

Take up our quarrel with the foe
To you, from failing hands, we throw
The torch: be yours to hold it high
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields

- Lieutenant Colonel John McCrae
