INOT AIR FORCE BASE,

Minot Air Force Base leadership conducted a Major Accident Response Exercise on the flight line July 20.

A MARE is a simulated significant event with mass casualties and is used to evaluate real world response capabilities of emergency personnel.

"The whole point of the exercise was to give first responders a chance to look at a major event as close to the real thing as possible," said Master Sgt. Brandy Hatcher, 5th Bomb Wing plans and programs superintendent. "We wanted to give them the look, smell and feel of an aircraft crash so they know exactly everything they need to do if this were to occur."

Before an airshow, MAREs are required to be accomplished within a month.

"Every time there's an airshow, it's mandatory that a MARE is completed involving an aircraft crash," said Hatcher. "This gives our first responders a chance to practice for the worst case situation during an airshow."

During this exercise, 35 Airmen acted as victims and witnesses to help make the scenario as real as possible.

"Some people had burned faces, backs, or cuts in various places," said Tech. Sgt. Ignacio Alatorre, 5th BW Self-Assessment Program manager and deficiency monitor. "It looked realistic, which helps with the realism during exercises."

Airmen from squadrons throughout the 5th BW provided support in many different ways. While the 5th Medical Group cared for the simulated victims, security forces Airmen and firefighters secured the crash area and ensured the scene was under control.

"After the scene is declared safe, recovery sweeps the area to retrieve any missing parts," said Hatcher. "After everything, it's just mass notifications to ensure everyone has accountability of their people."

The Inspector General's office hosts 14 exercises in a year, ensuring Team Minot is always prepared for any potential incidents.

Maintaining the fight: FMT Airmen support code change

SENIOR AIRMAN JONATHAN MCELDERRY | MINOT AIR FORCE BASE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. --

The 91st Missile Wing recently began its U.S. Strategic Command directed code change program, updating codes for all 150 launch facilities and 15 launch control centers assigned to Minot Air Force Base, North Dakota.

The annual code change requires maximum effort across the wing. From defenders and facility managers to missile maintainers, every member plays a vital role in ensuring mission success.

A key unit involved is the 91st Missile Maintenance Squadron facilities maintenance section. The facilities maintenance section is comprised of more than 50 maintainers charged with the responsibility of maintaining all of the base's launch facilities.

"Our job is to go to multiple sites and perform maintenance for the electromechanical team members to change the launch codes," said Senior Airman Mason Fruit, 91st MMXS facilities maintenance technician team chief. "We perform inspections on various components at the sites, including diesel generators, fuel systems, cooling systems and batteries."

During code change, FMT teams are also able to work ahead of schedule for other annual required maintenance. They work around the clock to complete all required maintenance tasks and prevent any discrepancies.

"Since code change is done annually, we also perform other annual maintenance tasks while we're out here as well," Fruit said. "Some tasks include servicing batteries to ensure voltage levels are where they should be so the facility can function properly."

Consistent training ensures maintenance technicians are confident in their ability to complete the mission.

"We're all thoroughly trained before we're qualified to perform maintenance at the sites," said Airman 1st

Class Ronald Demers, 91st MMXS FMT team member. "Before we dispatch to the sites for code change, we are also retrained on maintenance procedures to ensure we were ready to go. Our training prepares us for anything we could encounter out at the sites.'

This is Fruit's first time being a team chief during code change and he takes pride in knowing how their role is critical to nuclear deterrence.

"It's great to know we have such a large impact on the mission because without us, EMT wouldn't be able to do their job as quickly," Fruit said. "Our preventative maintenance keeps problems from arriving at the sites, which allows the longevity of the sites and ensures the success of our global mission."

NORTHERN NEIGHBORS DAY AIR AND SPACE SHOW 2018

Northern Neigbor Day Proves the Sky is the Limit!

BETH DUCHSHERER | NORTHERN SENTRY

ugust 4, 2018 will be remembered by many involved and who attended the Northern Neighbors Day, Air & Space Show. The Northern Neighbors Day is a day that the general civilian population is given the opportunity to learn what is entailed with the United States Air Force. It is also a chance for the Minot Air Force Base to thank the community for all of the support they have received over the years.

Minot Air Force Base has welcomed the public into Northern Neighbors Day events leading up to 2009 and from then the next show was not until 2016. Since 2016, the Minot Air Force base is hopeful to have this event every other year and has already begun planning for the next Air Show which is set for August 1st, 2020.

Prepared for a large attendance, the Minot Main Gate opened at 9:00am and over 5,000 vehicles were counted as they passed through. With the final totals of attendance over 21,000 people, the Minot Air Force Base is calling this event a success. With only minor improvements noted for the next Air & Space Show Lt. Col. Richard Sandwick, the Director for the 2018 Air & Space Show and Co-Deputy Directors, Patrick Travnicek and Jim Clifford, are making notes of improvements and what areas went well. Many units were in charge of overseeing areas such as the Security Forces and Base Ops to mention a few but there were several hundreds of military members, workers, employees and volunteers who contributed many countless hours to organizing such a momentous event. The event went especially well despite the temperatures well over the 90 degree mark, many attendees chose shaded areas provided by the large > aircraft wingspans. A few of the static displays included the B-25 Mitchell, F-22 Raptor and the C-17 Globemaster which was open for the attendees to walk through.

> The featured performers for this Air & Space Show were the USAF Thunderbirds who provided amazing aerial demonstrations at speeds up to 500 mph. The pilots showcased their skills and precision with maneuvers such as the Calypso & Reflection passes as well as the outstanding Delta Burst.

The MAFB Northern Neighbors Day event was certainly appreciated with the outstanding support from pated in a aerial precision manuever with Kent Pietsch's Deadsitck act where Kent shuts off the engine and lands without power and comes to a stop in front of a volunteer. (2) View from inside C-17 Rear Cargo Doors of crowd. (3) Volunteers were more than welcomed and an integral part of the success of the Air & Space Show. (4- inset) Lt. Col. Richard "MONA" Sandwick prepar-attendees and the community. Many civilians can now look forward to another exciting Air & Space Show if they were unable to attend this event. For more information about upcoming military events, the public can visit www.minot.af.mil or stay connected with the MAFB Newspaper, The Northern Sentry, which is located throughout the Minot Air Force Base as well as in several locations within Minot, ND.
