Restoring B-1 readiness: Egress works around the clock

AIRMAN 1ST CLASS RIVER BRUCE, 7TH BOMB WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Senior Airman Sheldon Morrison, 7th Component Maintenance Squadron aircrew egress systems apprentice, attaches a pitch stabilization control assembly, or STAPAC, to a B-1B Lancer ejection seat at Dyess Air Force Base, Texas, June 26, 2019. The STAPAC controls the positioning of the seat upon ejecting with a rotating gyro, which allows the seat to remain upright. The 7th CMS egress shop was recently tasked to conduct an out-of-cycle inspection on all B-1Bs in Dyess' fleet.

DYESS AIR FORCE BASE, Texas ---

or the past 17 years, the B-1B Lancer has seen combat and has been referred to as a work horse.

Subsequently, years of deployed operations, alongside recent maintenance findings, led the Air Force to decide on a safety standdown for the aircraft.

The stand-down is a temporary pause on flying operations for each aircraft in the B-1B fleet, allowing for in-depth maintenance. After the B-1Bs pass inspection, they resume flying immediately.

"This has been a great opportunity for us to reset from almost 18 years of continuous combat operations to work on sustaining the B-1 for the future," said Col. Jose Sumangil, 7th Bomb Wing commander. "Not only have our maintainers been able to inspect and work on the aircraft from top to bottom, they've been able to perform preventative maintenance, which will lead to the B-1B's continued readiness."

A key component of the standdown has been an out-of-cycle inspection on the egress system, which is made up of four ejection seats: pilot, co-pilot and two weapon systems officers.

Members of the 7th Component Maintenance Squadron egress shop have been conducting 24-hour operations for the past 90 days performing these inspections.

"The inspection is a 100 percent system validation on the egress system," said Senior Master Sgt. Michael Dlugiewicz, 7th CMS accessories flight chief. "We're functionally checking everything on the four seats. The only thing we can't function check is the actual ejection from the aircraft, as it is a one-time function."

This extensive review is normally only done in depot maintenance at Tinker Air Force Base, Oklahoma, every 60 months.

Twenty-four hour operations are normally a worst-case scenario, but have been necessary, according to Dlugiewicz.

"Each seat takes about two days to take apart, inspect and put back together," said Tech. Sgt. Joshua Wilson, 7th CMS aircrew egress systems craftsman. "It takes us about one week per aircraft, and we've pushed through close to a dozen B-1Bs so far."

The ejection explosive, the parachute systems, the ejection hatches and many other components are reviewed indepth, Wilson said.

Any B-1B currently flying has egress systems that have gone through this process, Dlugiewicz added. Many changes have been made to the egress system following the May 2018 in-flight emergency of a B-1B in Midland, Texas. The egress shop's mission has been to assess these changes as well.

"One of our motivations has been instilling confidence in the egress system to our aircrew," said

Senior Airman Sheldon Morrison. 7th CMS aircrew egress systems apprentice. "The safety of our aircrew is paramount to us; we don't want them questioning the egress system. We're motivated every day to provide peace of mind for the aircrew and their families."

"The amount of growth I've seen in egress Airmen over this process has been tremendous," said Wilson. "The egress systems are better off now, and these Airmen are better for it."

The shop will continue this process on all B-1Bs in the fleet still needing inspection.

"In my 20 years in service, I don't think I've been more proud of a group of Airmen," said Dlugiewicz. "We've asked a lot of them, and they've worked around the clock without complaining... too much," he said jokingly. "They have come in every shift and surged, and they've been happy to do it. It's inspiring."

Aircrew flight equipment: The right equipment for a global mission

Survival modules are a self-sustaining lifeline designed provide the aircrew with 72-hours of supplies and tools needed to survive in any environment around the globe until the members are rescued.

irmen with the 2nd Operations Support Squadron aircrew flight equipment flight line section work around the clock to revise, equip and maintain modules designed to bring aircrew back home in case of survival situation.

Survival modules are a selfsustaining lifeline designed provide the aircrew with 72-hours of supplies and tools needed to survive in any environment around the globe until the members are rescued.

"Them surviving long enough to be rescued can be dependent upon how well I do my job," said Airman 1st Class Matthew Ford, 2nd OSS AFE apprentice. "We pack both survival and first aid items in the kit one said item is the search and rescue beacon without that it would be difficult to know where the aircraft went down and who might have gone down with it.

Barksdale's unique global mission set challenges AFE Airmen to pack more items in to mission sets.

"You go to some other bases, and they prepare for a desert environment, cold environment or wet environment," said Staff Sgt. Clayton Riegle, 2nd OSS AFE craftsman. "The challenge is getting all that equipment to fit in our bomber survival module kit. With our global reach and our mission set we need to be prepared and make sure our aircrew has everything they need for all types of environments so that in their worst day we can have their backs."

Items packed into the survival module are not used as supplies to ration; the items are carefully it's a self-sustaining system.

"You have other survival components in there from a medical module that has your tourniquet and gauze to a survival module that has your flashlight, snare wire, hunting knife, and then you have emergency water. It has everything that aircrew will need to stay alive as long as needed." Riegle added.

Packing survival modules is not the only challenge AFE airmen face. Along with packing the survival module than other new kits, routine repairs are also bases making with more specific needed to keep existing kits in circulation.

"Both the aircraft and the equipment we work with were manufactured in the 1960s," Riegle said. "Since these units are no longer being manufactured, we have to maintain what we have to keep them sustainable. In addition to packing the units, we have the additional challenge to repair and refurbish the units we have here in-house."

Once supplies are packed by AFE Airmen, the supplies are constantly monitored for functionality and expiration dates to ensure in the event of an emergency, the aircrew won't have to worry about its functionality.

"I believe what we do here directly contributes to the lethality of the mission and our aircrew," Ford said. "We are here to give them the peace of mind, and enable them to fly their missions and know that if the worst were to happen, we have their backs by providing them necessary lifesaving tools crucial for survival and rescue. Ultimately, to get them back home safely."

While the odds of aircrew having to use a survival module are minimal, AFE Airmen take pride in their mission and continually train, practice and inspect equipment vigorously. Each survival module packed can potentially be a life that is saved in the future.

"Not only do we save a life by bringing them down safely with the parachute we also sustain that member's life from the moment they hit the ground to the moment they get picked up

Lake Sakakawea elevation, July 9, 1,851.85 feet above mean sea level (MSL); 46, 700 cubic feet per second (CFS) Garrison Dam average daily releases.

Devils Lake elevation: 1,449.02 feet above mean sea level (MSL). Stump Lake elevation: 1,449.05

- N.D. Game & Fish Dept. game wardens: Clear Lake producing a few walleye but more anglers still going to Goose Lake, which slowed a little but continues producing some walleye. Devils Lake slowed for walleye but those caught are nice eating size. Anglers working hard for a limit, though. Try 15 to 17 feet. Pike slowed considerably. Spotty walleye success on the east end of Lake Sakakawea.
- Devils Lake, Ed's Bait Shop, Devils Lake: Look for continued white bass success along the bridges. Try the northern lakes for walleye or the Golden Highway along Grahams Island. Lots of small fish.
- Devils Lake, Woodland Resort, Devils Lake: Continued fair to good for walleye with late evening still the best time. Try spinners and bottom bouncers in 10 feet and deeper or vertical jigging in 25 to 30 feet for larger fish. Work along the highways. Move around to locate white bass with better success on calm days in shallow water.
- Lake Darling, Karma C-Store, Ruthville: Lake Darling, Greene, and Grano areas producing a few walleye.
- Lake Darling, Upper Souris Nat'l. Wildlife Refuge, Foxholm: Try Grano or Greene for the best shorefishing success. A lot of anglers are finding slow success from boats, working hard for walleye but still finding a few.
- Lake Metigoshe, Four Seasons, Bottineau: Fair for bluegill but sort through small fish for keepers. Try North Lake on Lake Metigoshe for
- Lake Metigoshe, Lake Metigoshe State Park, Bottineau: Lots of boating activity but anglers are catching nice pike numbers with a few walleye mixed in.
- Lake Sakakawea/Lake Audubon, Cenex Bait & Tackle, Garrison: East end of Lake Sakakawea so-so for walleye.

Move around and try a variety of presentations. No reports from Lake Audubon or Missouri River.

- Lake Sakakawea/Lake Audubon, 6-Mile Bait & Tackle, Garrison: Continued fair walleye success from Fort Stevenson State Park to Highway 83 on Lake Sakakawea working shallow and moving out to deeper water. Try throwing jigs and plastics or bait up towards the shallow shorelines or 12 to 18 feet along sunken humps with variety of presentations. Work deep along sunken humps on Lake Audubon for walleye, as well.
- Lake Sakakawea, Indian Hills Resort, Garrison: Fair for walleye in 15 to 25 feet using spinners with leeches or nightcrawlers. Work the points along the south shore or Pepsi Point on the north side depending on the wind.
- Lake Sakakawea, Scenic 23, New Town: Walleye success improving again with overall fair to good
- Lake Sakakawea, Van Hook Resort, New Town: Try 20 to 25 feet with spinners or long snells and Lindy rigs and minnows for walleye. Look for a transition to nightcrawlers soon. Move around with the bite still a little tougher in the last week or so.
- Lake Sakakawea/Missouri River, Scott's Bait & Tackle, Pick City: Missouri River continues producing fair walleye success in the morning. Try jigs and plastics, minnow, or nightcrawlers. Also try Lindy rigs. Work the spillway channel inlet or down river around the cable crossing. Spillway is spotty. Chutes inconsistent but look for some trout, walleye, salmon, or catfish using 3-way swivels. Shore success also inconsistent, likely due to changing weather fronts. Most activity on the east end of Lake Sakakawea is alona Steinke Bay, Wolf Creek, Sakakawea State Park, or east and south side of Mallard Island. Try 22 feet with Lindy rigs and nightcrawlers. Also try casting minnows and plastics up towards shore in shallow water. Bite is inconsistent overall, however. Try 60 to 80 feet for salmon using squids and flashers or herring.
- Lake Sakakawea/northwest N.D. lakes, Scenic Sports, Williston: Improving water clarity around White Earth Bay on Lake Sakakawea so look for improving walleye success as water continues clearing. Better success along the south shore, t's a double blow in 2019. Blow One news of finding adult mussels zebra Lake Ashtabula, a popular southeastern reservoir, not just the Red River.

A double blow

PATRICIA STOCKDILL, PRAIRIE ADVENTURES

Blow Two was the discovery of bighead carp in the James River near LaMoure.

Both are aquatic nuisance species. Zebra mussels pose major threats, not just to a fishery, but also to those who rely on water in an infested water body. They attach to things such as intakes, which can affect maintenance and cost of water supplies, etc.

Once a lake or river has zebra mussels, it's virtually impossible to eradicate.

That's why zebra mussels are deemed an ANS Class I species. Emergency regulations are now in place on Lake Ashtabula prohibiting the transportation of bait, fish, and any water from the lake. Red River restrictions began in 2015.

Leftover bait is best disposed of via fish cleaning station grinder or discarded in a dumpster, N.D. Game and Fish Department Aquatic Nuisance Species Coordinator Jessica Howell advised. "You can't take any live bait away from the lake or river."

Howell credits a sharpeyed angler for recognizing and alerting the Game and Fish Department to the zebra mussel. He found it when his tackle caught a piece of aquatic vegetation - and a juvenile zebra mussel less than a centimeter in size firmly attached.

His sharp attention prompted the Game and Fish Department to inspect the lake and confirming additional zebra mussels. "They're (subsequent findings) definitely adults," she described.

An additional issue is that zebra mussels can have multiple spawns, including two during July and September. Ironically, that coincides with North Dakota's two busiest summer water-based recreation holidays - the 4th of July and Labor Day. Plus, veligers young zebra mussels - can grow in standing water.

As if that's not enough of a problem, "adults can live up to 28 days out of water...in cold and moist conditions," Howell added.

Within weeks of finding zebra mussels in Lake Ashtabula, the Game and Fish Department found a 26-pound female bighead carp in the James River while conducting population monitoring for yet another ANS species - silver carp, which are also in the James River.

The bighead carp possibly moved upriver because of high water levels, she described. 'I know they were in South Dakota...I know we caught at least one in Mitchell (South Dakota) several years ago," she continued.

Bighead carp, like silver carp, are considered Class III ANS. While additional ANS regulations won't be placed on the James River, Howell stressed the situation emphasizes the need to follow North Dakota's ANS regulations – recreational boaters, commercial waterway users, and anglers alike - and limit moving water from one water body to another.

Bighead carp can get up to 100 pounds; silver carp up to 80 pounds, Howell described. Unlike common carp with large scales, bighead and silver carp have fine scales. Aerial Spraying on Minot Air Force Base

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE OFFICE OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE,

Minot Air Force Base has requested assistance from the 910th Airlift Wing's Air Force Aerial Spray Squadron, to conduct aerial spraying for mosquito control between 15-19 July for Minot Air Force Base, and the city of Minot. Due to uncertain weather conditions the exact time and area to be treated cannot be determined in advance.

The Air Force Aerial Spray Squadron will be applying U.S. Environmental Protection Agency registered pesticides. Adult mosquito control will occur between the hours of 7 p.m. and 2:00 a.m. The applications will be made using a modified C-130H cargo aircraft at 150 ft above ground level.

The purpose of the aerial spraying for mosquitoes is to protect public health, ease working conditions, and improve the quality of life for members working at Minot AFB and living in the surrounding area. Again due to uncertain weather conditions the exact time and area to be treated cannot be determined in advance.

Minot AFB Public Health recommends humans and domestic animals remain indoors while the aerial spraying is occurring immediately overhead or upwind from your location and until the mist settles to the ground. These products were selected because they pose minimal health hazards to humans and domestic animals with aerial application.

Concerned citizens should contact the 5th Civil Engineer Squadron pest management office at 723-2393.

HISTORY FACT. On June 24, 1963, Strategic Air Command accepted the first 10 Minuteman IB missiles at Ellsworth AFB, South Dakota, as part of the 66th Strategic Missile Squadron.

RV Expo Rolling Into North Dakota State Fairground

PAMELA KAY, FMCA

Cincinnati, Ohio —

MCA, an international organization RV owners, will be celebrating its 100th International Convention and RV Expo at the North Dakota State Fairgrounds in Minot August 14 through 17. The event has been ${\tt dubbed~"Minot\,Magic-100\,Times}$ The Fun" in honor of the host city and in recognition of the RV club's 100th convention milestone.

"We're really looking forward to a return visit to Minot," noted FMCA national president Jon Walker. "It's been quite a while since our last convention there, but members who attended that August 2005 event and the ones prior haven't forgotten the warm welcome the town extended to FMCA. And we're really excited to be celebrating such a momentous occasion in our history — FMCA's 100th convention.'

FMCA invites all RV owners to join the festivities that will také place in mid-August. And those who are considering the RV lifestyle or are just curious will have an opportunity to take part as well.

During an FMCA convention, RV owners stay at the host facility in their homes on wheels, and a new neighborhood pops up almost overnight.

One key element of the event is the RV Expo. Major RV manufacturers and dealers bring the latest models and invite convention attendees and members of the public to stop by for a tour. Hundreds of RVs – in all shapes and sizes — will be open for inspection during show hours. RV-related accessories, components, services, and other products of interest to travelers will be available as well.

RV Expo hours will be Wednesday, August 14, from 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. and Thursday through Saturday, August 15 through 17, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00

When they aren't shopping, attendees can take part in seminars about topics ranging from RV driving/towing and RV maintenance to microwaveconvection cooking and technology for travelers. Approximately 100 different sessions will be held.

A variety of daytime and evening entertainment is offered, and attendees have numerous opportunities for socializing with others who share their love of the RV lifestyle. These range from organized activities such as morning coffee hour and an ice cream social to afternoon happy hours in the RV parking areas and various impromptu meetups.

Multiple options are available for attending FMCA conventions. As noted, RV owners are invited to bring their vehicle and stay onsite to enjoy all of the activities. Those who don't yet own an RV are welcome to come for the day and just explore the RV Expo, or purchase a "passport" that allows them to take part in all activities

(with no RV parking).
Registrations will be accepted online at FMCA.com and by telephone at (513) 474-3622 or (800) 543-3622 until August 6. After that date, space will still be available, and RV owners can simply pay upon arrival at the North Dakota State Fairgrounds. Day passes, which provide admittance only to the RV Expo, will be sold onsite. The day pass for Wednesday, August 14, also will be good for Thursday, August 15. Saturday, August 17, has been declared "Minot Day," and local residents will be admitted free to the RV Expo portion of the event that day.

For new RVers or those considering the RV lifestyle, a special RV Basics course will be offered at the North Dakota State Fairgrounds prior to the convention. Led by RV experts, the 2.5-day course (August 11-13) covers topics such as RV maintenance, RV weights, tire safety, and fire and life safety. Advance registration is required. For more information, visit https://www.fmca.com/rveducation-101.

And for new RVers who want to feel more confident behind the wheel, two-day RV driving and one-day backing courses will be offered in partnership with the RV Driving School in advance of the FMCA convention in Minot. Classes take place during the August 7 through 10 timeframe, and students use their own RV. Advance registration is required; for information, visit https:// www.fmca.com/rv-driving-school.
