PCS...It's Part of the Lifestyle

Every year about this time I start to hear about my friends at Minot AFB getting orders for another position at another base. As much as it is part of the lifestyle of a military family, it still becomes one of those scenarios; "What scenarios? You

Well, I have developed an attitude of "Don't ask if you really don't want to hear the results?" Or maybe better said, ignorance is bliss. It isn't that I can't count to two; it's just easier if I don't. My Honorary Commander, Mark McDonald, gave me the tentative date for the change of command of the 91 MW. That would mean that Col McGhee is leaving Minot AFB. Col McGhee has been a great friend of the Northern Sentry. Both he and Col Hoadley; yep, claiming ignorance on that one, too, have always made themselves available for interviews for the Northern Sentry. It is greatly appreciated. Before we know it, June will be here, and we will be covering two change of command ceremonies. PCS season is always bittersweet. We know that the challenges of Minot AFB prepares those who lead. We don't take the slogan "Only the Best Come North" lightly. It is tried and true.

DID A LITTLE TRAVELING

I have been on the road for the past 10 days, with the goal of visiting relatives in Vancouver, British Columbia. On a map, it doesn't look "too bad" of a drive. But maps can certainly be deceiving. Maybe to put things into perspective; we put Malmstrom AFB in our rear view mirror on day

#1 of our journey. And on day #2 we drove by the Fairchild AFB sign near Spokane, Washington.

Not that I would highly recommend such a rigorous travel schedule on every vacation, it's just that I was working my son on the amount of time he and his wife could "get off" to meet us in Vancouver. As far as Vancouver, British Columbia? It is very Canadian. A little bit of old, mixed in with a lot of new. The 2010 Winter Olympics were held in Vancouver. There is still a lot of that infrastructure that defines downtown Vancouver. Worth a bit of a "walk around" if you have the

LESS TRAFFIC-I'M OK WITH THAT

My daily commute to work is about 7 minutes. I may encounter a North Dakota traffic jam, waiting at a red light for 20 seconds, once in a while, but you only need to get into a line for a busy airport, like Vancouver, to appreciate that we don't have to deal with a lot of traffic, and I am OK with that. I drive very defensively, and probably with too much caution. However, I figure that it is my job to operate my motor vehicle in a way that does not annoy others. I don't think that is possible in a lot of big cities. Everyone seems like they are in such a big hurry. I hope to report that between me and my spouse, Sue, we navigated our pickup to Vancouver and back, safely. Less traffic? You betcha! I am OK with that.

Every year the DBPA (Downtown Business Professional Association) sponsors a Bunny Hop. It's kind of like Halloween at Easter, without the costumes. Come Hop into spring with Downtown Minot's annual Bunny Hop! Moms, Dads, and Grandparents, bring your preschoolers aged 5 and under with their Easter baskets, so we can fill them full of fun! Date is 10 AM to 12 Noon on March 28th on Main Street (and a few other locations) in Downtown Minot. See you there!

farmers' markets or growing garden vegetables and flowers.

In addition, we are short one director on the board and would love to see someone from southeast North Dakota step forward and fill that position. We're having our annual meeting during the conference so someone new could be elected to the board. Several other board members' positions are up for re-election. We'd love nothing more than to have new people challenge for those positions.

One of the things I've learned personally since November, in visiting people across the state, is our organization has lacked an important element in local foods and that's education.

One-hundred percent of the people that I have met, spoken with on the telephone or have had communications with in emails, have all said conference attendance would be better if we offered educational opportunities.

We listened and we believe we've done a good job of providing that in the seminars. Food safety, soil health, how to market your items properly at a farmers' market, hands on wellness, farm to school, market display, feeding your community and others are all on the agenda.

And this is just the beginning. Some of us are already working on the 2025 conference to secure speakers and sponsorships. We've heard the membership loud and clear and those educational opportunities are going to continue into the future.

Attendance has been down in the past five years because of limited educational opportunities. Take a look at the schedule yourself on the NDFMGA website. We think this is a really good start and now that we are gaining some traction back, the sky is the limit.

As an example, I've found out through enquiries there are people all across this nation who are willing to come to North Dakota if it can help. What I didn't know is these people set their schedules well in advance and that's why 2025 is already on the radar.

As an example, we've booked a speaker for next year who has spent a career in growing plants and flowers in greenhouses. I'm also in communications with professors at the University of Vermont, UC-Davis and Michigan State University regarding their expertise on local

But for now, we look forward to March 21-23. There's something for everyone at this conference, we've insisted upon it. And, we've opened it up to the public so anyone who is interested in local foods, may register and join us.

Details may be found at (ndfarmersmarkets.org). You can register and pay for it online and a complete schedule is listed so you are aware of the individual events.

Hope to see you there.

SHE'S NOT FROM AROUND HERE AMY ALLENDER

A group text between my husband, Derek, our friend Ben, and me has been ongoing for more than a decade now. Ben, a born-andraised hotdisher, is one of the most Minot people I know—and I mean that in the best way possible.

In our group chat, we typically coordinate weekly Sunday dinner plans. Sprinkled among recipe discussions are tidbits about various church committees, jokes about living in the upper Midwest, and lighthearted news (typically centered around life in Hotdish Land.)

Last week, a smile spread across my face when I opened the latest text in our thread to find a link to a New York Times dialect quiz.

As a writer and lover of words, regional language differences have always fascinated me. It's to be expected that English speakers in different countries would use different terms for the same items. For instance, the "elevator" in America is a "lift" in England. The device we call a "weed whacker" in the states is known as a "whipper snipper" in Australia. Even more interesting than these standard differences between nationalities are the differences in verbiage, dialect, and understanding within our own drastically, and we can become very defensive over our word choices.

From region to region, our terms for simple daily items can vary

I first remember being enamored with regional dialect as a brand-new military spouse at age 22, living in Florida after spending my whole life in northern Indiana. At Target, my friend said, "Let's grab a buggy." I imagined an Amish horse and buggy—the only buggy I'd ever known. She meant a "shopping cart." Another day, a coworker asked if I had a "pin." I rummaged through my purse and produced a safety pin. She laughed and said, "A pin...like for writing." Back in my purse. I grabbed a "pen."

purse, I grabbed a "pen."
Comments about "speaking hotdish" are common around my house. From debates over what separates a casserole from a hotdish to the pronunciation of the word "sauna," we love to ponder the finer points of NoDak life. Thus, with eagerness, I opened the dialect quiz.

Results from are given to respondents in the form of a heat map, indicating where your dialect is most compatible. The quiz, originally created by Josh Katz, who has since written a book entitled "Speaking American," explores our differing dialects from coast to coast. Questions are based on those from a Harvard Dialect Survey. Responses from more than 350,000 respondents were taken into account to create the resulting maps.

All of that to say, it's fun—but also scientific

Derek, Ben, and I all took the quiz and shared our maps. Ben's results revealed his dialect is most compatible with North Dakota, with South Dakota and Minnesota trailing close behind. (He then noted that NoDakers have no words for many of the items mentioned in the quiz.) Derek's map showed his most compatible regions were in Northern Indiana and Illinois. My map, however, was a bit of a shock, showing strong similarity to states ranging from Ohio to California.

CUTLINE. PIX image of dialect maps. "We were all surprised when my map showed compatibility with so many locations. Derek's map is on top, mine is bottom."

Maybe the "She's not from around here" lifestyle has muddled me. Perhaps I subconsciously hang on to a piece of everywhere I've lived and visited through language.

But what about you?

Do you eat casseroles or hotdishes? Do you drink soda or pop? How do you pronounce the word "sauna"?

Is it kitty corner, catty corner, or diagonal? Do you eat dinner or supper? How many syllables are in the word "crayon"? What about "caramel"? How do you address a group of people? Do you have a word for when the sun shines while it's raining? Do you have a term for the day before Halloween? What do you call athletic shoes?

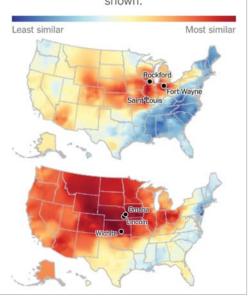

Recently I took a dialect placement quiz and was surprised by the results. Speaking American is a fascinating endeavor.

Your Map

See the pattern of your dialect in the map below. Three of the most similar cities are shown.

We were all surprised when my map showed compatibility with so many locations. Derek's map is on top, mine is bottom.

You can find the quiz by Googling "NYT Dialect Quiz" to discover your own map. In the meantime, ask someone about some of these words. It just might open up a great conversation.

SLICE OF LIFE KIM FUNDINGSLAND

Several years ago, I was the key instigator of an incident that still wakes me up some nights. Not in a cold sweat or turn-on-the-light fear, but rather with a chuckle and a laugh.

However, the incident which I am about to reveal placed me in a situation so precarious that I might never have enjoyed the opportunity to laugh again. So much so that others in my company sternly warned that my very life was dangerously close to being extinguished.

The entire episode happened during an otherwise pleasant fishing trip. By agreement among friends, we arranged to rendezvous at the Parshall Bay boat ramp to engage in some wonderful walleye fishing on famed Lake Sakakawea. After some friendly greetings and warm handshakes, we backed three boats down the ramp and into the

Since I was a driver this day, I pulled my vehicle and trailer up the ramp and into a parking spot. During my short walk back to the

I noticed a set of keys someone had apparently dropped in the parking lot. I picked them up and put them in my pocket, intending to inquire if someone in our group had lost them.

However, so eager were we to head out for what surely was going to be some fantastic fishing, I forgot about the keys.

A Risky Splash

We were catching fish within minutes of reaching our chosen destination. All three boats were within close proximity of one another, close enough to talk fishing presentations and the like. As the cool of the morning gave way to warm sunshine and I began taking off my jacket, I felt the recently found keys in my pocket.

I placed the keys in a zippered compartment of my tackle bag for safe keeping. As we approached the noon hour the captain of one of our three boats said he forgot his boat's lunch cooler in the back seat of his pickup and would have to make the long trip back to the dock to retrieve it.

It was an opening far too good to pass up. I said I was about to make a run back to the dock to get some necessary fishing gear I'd forgotten and wound kindly grab the lunch for him and his fishing buddies at the same time.

What I expected next was that he would be unable to locate his lost keys and tear his boat apart trying to find them. However, he produced his keys from his pocket, moved his boat next to mine, carefully handed me the keys, and generously thanked me for making the run up the lake so he could continue fishing.

I noticed that his keys were on a ring with no fob and similar in appearance to the set I found earlier, the very set of keys I had secreted away in my tackle bag.

I piloted my boat back to our fishing spot, pulled alongside the boat missing the cooler, and handed it off to them. This kind act was met with a very pleasant response from all. My plan was working to perfection.

As I eased my boat away from his, he said, "Wait. My keys."

Having already switched to the keys I'd found earlier that morning, I carelessly tossed them to him, high enough in the air so he could see them but woefully short of landing in his boat. This act, of course, was my intent with the full knowledge that his real set of keys remained safely in my possession.

It was but a millisecond after the keys disappeared beneath the water that the air was filled with expletive deleted oaths that covered everything from my sanity to well-being. The third boat joined the fray too, expressing similar sentiments which now were gaining concurrence from the other occupants of my boat. My fishing partners strongly suggested we return to the dock before the others to avoid the threatened retaliation.

Naturally, I let this storm of saucy criticism build until I thought it best to come clean before someone made good on the threats directed at me or suffered from some sort of internal combustion.

Smiling, I held up the real set of keys which I safely handed from one boat to another. Well received at first, compliments quickly reverted to more threats rather than gracious appreciation for my memorable and cunning prank. When I questioned their obviously fragile persona and absence of sense of humor, their tone was elevated to a level never believed possible. Fishing boats nearby began moving away, staying close enough due to morbid curiosity, but unwilling venture within the "cone of the volcano".

My previously friendly fishing companions were now brandishing fillet knives and needle-nosed pliers and, in a tone that could only be described as unfiltered rage, led me to believe that I had, perhaps, overplayed my hand. I dismissed that possibility quickly, hiding a smirk and a smile I dare not reveal given the volatile and somewhat unpredictable circumstances of the moment.

Ahhh, the joy of fishing!

AIR FORCE HOLDS ITS FIRST ALL-FEMALE ALERT AT MINOT, F.E. WARREN, AND MALMSTROM AFB'S MARCH 22, 2016

Each year, missileers who join the all-female alert receive a patch. This is the first patch from

On March 22, 2016, missileers from the 20th Air Force made history by performing the first all-female ICBM alert. The idea was proposed by Col. Stacy Huser, former commander of the 91st Operations Group at Minot Air Force Base, North Dakota. The day consisted of 90 missileers from Minot AFB, F.E. Warren AFB, Wyoming, and Malmstrom AFB, Montana, as well as female B-52 air crews from Barksdale AFB, Louisiana and Minot, and aircrews from 2016. (USAF Photo / Airman Collin Schmidt) Offutt AFB, Nebraska. At F.E. Warren, missileers were joined by two women who trailblazed the way for today's female Airmen, Retired Col. Pat Fornes, the first female officer on a U.S. missile crew, and Retired Col. Linda Aldrich, the first female Minuteman ICBM crew member. The first all-female alert was an effort to show the strength and determination of female Airmen and to prove their vital roles in continuing the mission every day. "The fact that we can look across our pre-departure briefing room and see a woman sitting in every seat, for every combat crew going out on nuclear alert, is in itself, significant," said Col. Tom Wilcox, commander of the 341st Missile Wing at Malmstrom. The alert soon became a yearly celebration of Women's History Month, and it continues to this day.

Minot Air Force Base welcomes Airmen home from Bomber Task Force deployment

SENIOR AIRMAN ALEXANDER NOTTINGHAM, 5TH BOMB WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D.

Airmen from Minot returned home from their most recent Bomber Task Force deployment to Andersen Air Force Base, Guam, on March 6, 2024.

The task force, given the name 23rd Expeditionary Bomb Squadron (EBS), composed of approximately 280 Airmen and six B-52H Stratofortresses, was tasked to accomplish 36 strategic deterrence missions within the U.S. Indo-Pacific Command area of responsibility during the six-week deployment.

Strategic bomber missions enhance readiness and provide the training necessary to respond to any potential crisis or challenge across the globe. These missions demonstrate the Pacific Air Force's capacity to dominate, deny and deter any aggression or influence from adversaries.

Team Minot's participation in BTF missions enables aircrews, maintainers, and support personnel to integrate with allied and partner nations in the region while completing familiar global strike mission sets.

Flosi takes his place as the 20th Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force

SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

IOINT BASE ANDREWS, Md. (AFNS) -

Chief Master Sgt. David A. Flosi was formally installed March 8 as the 20th Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force.

In remarks after the formal "Change of Responsibility" ceremony in which he assumed the job from retiring Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force JoAnne S. Bass, Flosi emphasized both the opportunity before him and what it means to the Total Force at a time of dramatic change and challenge across the service.

"As I assume this role, I'm aware of the challenges ahead," Flosi said. "We live in a rapidly evolving world, where new threats emerge with alarming frequency, and the demands on our Air Force continue to grow.

demanding, I am confident in our ability to rise to the occasion. I am confident because over the course of my career, time and time again, I have witnessed the dedication and professionalism of our Airmen," he said.

Flosi's installation as the highestranking enlisted noncommissioned officer in the Air Force completes a total overhaul of senior military leaders for the service. Gen. David Allvin was installed as Air Force chief of staff on Nov. 2 and Gen. Jim Slife officially became Air Force vice chief of staff on Dec. 29.

All three senior leaders, along with Department of the Air Force Secretary Frank Kendall, will be instrumental in successfully establishing far-reaching plans to "reoptimize" the Air Force to better confront China and other modernday adversaries.

Allvin stressed that effort in welcoming Flosi during the dignified ceremony, which also included comments from Gen. CQ Brown, Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and, prior to that, Air Force chief of staff.

"Dynamic, fast-paced environments require agile, determined leadership that's exactly what Chief Flosi brings to the fight," Allvin said. "We've got work to do, and I know Chief Flosi is ready to move out on reoptimization to enhance our readiness and mold our one Air

In his remarks, Kendall offered a glowing tribute to Bass and provided clear guidance for what he expects from Flosi.

Bass, he said, "has served over 30 years in the Air Force, and we are an infinitely better organization because of your service. She's been a standout leader at every level.

"Chief Flosi, you're going to have to fill some pretty big shoes. I look forward to working together and to everything you have to offer. I want to welcome you to an incredible team. ... We will need your experience and your perspective to make sure the needs of our Airmen and their families are always at the forefront of all of our efforts," Kendall said.

Brown echoed Kendall in his praise and admiration for Bass.

"Jo, I'm so glad I hired you. You've been an inspiration for me. We were able to break barriers together," Brown said, referring to their shared histories in which Brown was the first African American to be named Chief of Staff of any branch of the military and Bass's selection as the first woman to serve as a Service senior enlisted advisor in the history of the United States military.

"You've been an inspiration to me. You've been an inspiration to our Air Force; you've been an inspiration to our nation," Brown Flosi steps into the job being vacated by the retiring Bass, who senior leaders said set the standard by which all subsequent Chiefs will be judged.

"Chief Bass's passion for Airmen and their families has defined her time as our 19th Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force," Allvin said. "Her tireless work on their behalf has propelled our force forward. Even after over 30 years of dedicated service, I have no doubts that she will continue to be an advocate for Airmen and airpower moving forward.'

> U.S. AIR FORCE PHOTO I ANDY MORATAYA

In her remarks at the dignified highlighted Bass memories and achievements from across her 31-year career. She thanked a list of people who helped her at every point, including her husband Rahn, her parents, and a large group of Air Force colleagues who served as mentors and role models.

She directed special praise to Brown, who selected her to be chief master sergeant of the Air Force when Brown served as chief of staff.

"General Brown, chairman, thank you for hiring me as your wingman and chief. The best words you shared with me were 'proceed until apprehended.' And I did just that," she said.

"I may have gotten apprehended once or twice, maybe three times. In any case, you let me be me and get after the things that matter to our Airmen and their families. It's been an honor for Rahn and I to serve alongside you and Sharene,' Flosi's new job is similar to his previous post but on a larger, more high-profile stage. He arrived at the Pentagon from Air Force Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, where he served as the command chief master sergeant. That role was similar in many respects to the role he now assuming. At AFMC, he is the senior enlisted leader and the primary advisor to the commander on all matters regarding the readiness, training, professional development, and effective utilization of the command's 89,000 total force Airmen.

Like his predecessors, Flosi pledged to lock arms with Airmen to help them – and the Air Force – thrive and succeed.

"Today, as we stand on the dawn serving at a time of consequence. It is imperative we acknowledge the urgency of the challenges we face,"

Later in his remarks, he added, "Fellow Airmen, my commitment to you and to our Air Force is unwavering. As we navigate the complexities of great power competition and seek to optimize our force, I pledge to be your wingman."

Prior to his tour at Wright-Patterson AFB, Flosi served as the command chief master sergeant at the Air Force's Sustainment Center at Tinker AFB, Oklahoma.

Flosi began his Air Force career in 1996 as a nuclear weapons specialist. That focus expanded over the years to include various leadership duties in conventional and nuclear munitions, as well as missile operations, program management and test contingency operations.

Like Bass and previous CMSAFs, Flosi will be the public face for Air Force personnel to those in all levels of government. He will be a personal adviser to Allvin and other senior leaders, both military and civilian, and will be expected to provide insight on issues regarding the welfare, readiness, morale and proper utilization and progress of the Air Force's entire cadre of Flosi emerged as the clear choice from a group of the most highly respected, experienced graduated command chief master sergeants from across the Air Force's global operations, officials said. These leaders were selected based on breadth of experience, recommendations from senior commanders and performance across each candidate's Air Force

HOW LONG CAN YOU GO IN BETWEEN GETTING AN OIL CHANGE?

Keeping up with vehicle maintenance sometimes can feel like a chore, especially when you can't exactly remember the last time you took your car into the auto shop. Periodic maintenance matters in the long run so you can avoid more costly repairs down the road.

An oil change is one of the more basic services your vehicle needs to perform at its best. Oil is specifically designed to lubricate your vehicle's engine. Fresh oil helps prevent your engine from using more energy and fuel than it needs and protects engine parts from wear and tear. We'll walk you through why oil changes matter for your vehicle and how long is too long to wait in between oil change services.

WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU DON'T GET AN OIL CHANGE?

When life gets busy, it may be tempting to put things, like an oil change, on the back burner. Delaying important preventative maintenance could cost you overall. Without good engine oil, you are putting your car's engine in danger. Putting off an oil change for too long can:

Worsen engine performance: Good engine oil keeps all the parts in an engine lubricated, but as it degrades it becomes more difficult for an engine to run at full capacity. As engine oil ages in service, acids accumulate in the oil. Additive performance and protection may also fade and the oil can thicken in viscosity.

Cause costly engine damage: Neglecting an oil change long-term can have disastrous consequences. Old oil can eventually turn into sludge or deposits that can cause serious damage from a smoking engine to complete engine failure.

HOW LONG CAN YOU GO WITHOUT AN OIL CHANGE?

Now that you know how important an oil change is for your vehicle, you may be wondering what's the best way to keep up with maintenance. A lot of this depends on your type of vehicle and how you drive. The best way to stay on top of maintenance intervals is to refer to your vehicle owner manual or the oil life monitor displayed on the driver information center of your dashboard or center console.

DON'T MISS OUT ON YOUR NEXT OIL CHANGE

When it is time to schedule service at the auto shop, there's plenty of benefits to getting your oil changed at Tires Plus. Each oil change comes with a free courtesy inspection, speedy service, and we regularly offer coupons to save you money. Find your nearest Tires Plus for assistance from our auto experts on all your car maintenance and tires needs.

Minot AFB Curlers One of a Kind All Military Curling League

KIM FUNDINGSLAND

That "funny" sport is proving to be great fun for Minot Air Force Base personnel.

"We have a special position as the only recognized military curling league in the United States," said Wesley Mason, MAFB league coordinator for the Minot Curling Club. "We are kind of unique."

There is no arguing that, but then curling anywhere could be labeled unique. It's a sport with an ancient history that remains alive, particularly in areas of the northern U.S. Recent Olympic Games have brought renewed interest in curling Remarkably, the MAFB Curling League boasts 11 teams taking part in weekly competition. Including spouses, who are eligible to play, the number of participants in the league is about 70 with more interest being shown every year.

"I'm quite proud of the program," remarked Mason. "We try to have 6 to 8 people on a team. You only need four, but they go on alert and have other deployment responsibilities. up for teams with people they work with every day. They can razz each other about it all season long."

The season semi-finals for the league were held this past Tuesday. Participants were having fun, but their competitiveness was evident too, a transformation from their introduction to the sport.

"First timers come in giggling about this funny sport, but once they develop a feel for the game they want to win," said Mason.

The Minot Curling Club is located on the State Fairgrounds. The facility has five sheets of ice for curling, allowing for ten teams to compete at any one time. The MAFB season champion will be crowned March 19.

Curling team members sweep the ice smooth as a rock enters the house.

A participant in the MAFB Curling League is about to deliver a rock during competition at the Minot Curling Club.

NOTES ON BEING SAFE

ALS CLASS 24-C

What is Lockout/ Tagout?

SSGT JOE VERGARA 5TH BOMB WING COIC OCCUPATIONAL

Have you ever been to a job site, or even a local business when you hear someone call out "Hey Joe, be sure to lock and tag out that piece of equipment?" or "You better deenergize that system before you work on it!"

This common practice is known throughout the industrial and non-industrial world as Lockout/ Tagout, better known as LOTO. So what is LOTO?

Lockout-Tagout is a safety procedure which is used in industry and research settings to ensure that dangerous machines are properly shut off and not started up again prior to the completion of maintenance or servicing work. It requires that hazardous power sources be "isolated and rendered inoperative" before any repair procedure is started. "Lock and tag" works in conjunction with a lock usually locking the device or the power source with the hasp, and placing it in such a position that no hazardous power sources can be turned on. The procedure requires that a tag be affixed to the locked device indicating that it should not be turned on.

Modern machinery can contain many hazards to workers, from things like electrical, mechanical, pneumatic or hydraulic sources. For example a typical industrial machine may contain things like hot fluids, moving presses, blades, propellers, electrical heaters. conveyor belts with pinch points, moving chains, ultraviolet light, Disconnecting or making safe the equipment involves the removal of all energy sources and is known as isolation. The steps necessary to isolate equipment are often documented in an Isolation Procedure or a Lockout Tagout Procedure. The isolation procedure generally includes the following tasks:

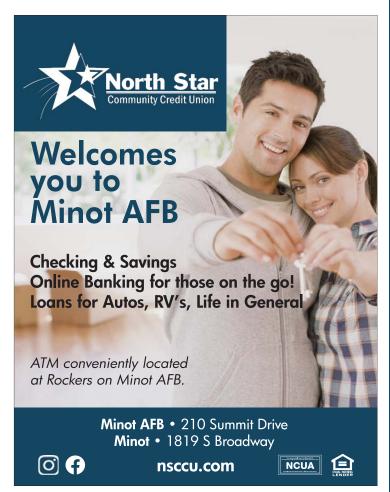

- 1. Identify the energy source(s) 2. Isolate the energy source(s)
- 3. Lock and/or Tag the energy source(s)
- 4. Prove that the equipment isolation is effective

Modern safety manufacturers provide a range of isolation devices specifically designed to fit various switches, valves and effectors. For example most modern circuitbreakers have a provision to have a small padlock attached to prevent their activation. For other devices such as ball or gate valves, plastic pieces which either fit against the pipe and prevent movement, or clam-shell style objects, which completely surround the valve and prevent its manipulation are used. A common feature of these devices is their bright color, usually red to increase visibility and allow workers to readily see if a device is isolated. Also, the devices are usually of such a design and construction to prevent it being removed with any moderate force. That is to say that an isolation device does not have to stand up to a chainsaw, but if an operator forcibly removes it, it will be immediately visible that it has been tampered with.

With all this information, you are probably asking yourself How does this program apply to me?" Employees can be seriously or fatally injured if machinery they service or maintain unexpectedly energizes, starts up, or releases stored energy. OSHA's standard on the Control of Hazardous Energy (LOTO), can be located in Title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) Part 1910.147. This regulation spells out the steps all employers must take to prevent accidents associated with hazardous energy. The standard addresses practices and procedures necessary to disable machinery and prevent the release of potentially hazardous energy while maintenance or servicing activities are performed. With this being said you may ask yourself "if I unplug a radio or microwave oven after use, do I need LOTO?' No vou do not. Exposure to hazardous energy is controlled completely by unplugging the equipment from an electric outlet and where the employee doing the service or maintenance has exclusive control of the plug. This applies only if electricity is the only form of hazardous energy to which employees may be exposed. This exception encompasses many portable hand tools and some cord and plug connected machinery and equipment.

In closing, when dealing with LOTO and you are not sure, do not hesitate to ask for assistance. The shop supervisor, the person doing the actual work, or the Wing Safety office can provide more extensive detail concerning LOTO in your

Public Invited to Easter Egg Hunt at Chimney Park State Historic Site, Medora

THE STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF NORTH DAKOTA

Medora, N.D. - The public is invited to the 82nd annual Harry Roberts Memorial Easter Egg Hunt on Saturday, March 30, 1 p.m. MT, at Chimney Park in Medora. This free event is for children ages 12 and under. Thousands of eggs will be hidden within Chimney Park. Children should bring their own collection basket or bag and must be accompanied by an adult. This Harry Roberts, the first site supervisor at the Chateau de Morès State Historic Site, started this annual Easter egg hunt in 1941. The event is sponsored by the Chateau de Morès State Historic Site, Medora Chamber of Commerce, and Friends of the Chateau de Morès.

In case of inclement weather, the hunt will be rescheduled to Saturday, April 6. Schedule changes will be posted on Facebook facebook.com/ ChateauDeMores.

SALMON WITH SPRING VEGETABLES AND PESTO

INGREDIENTS

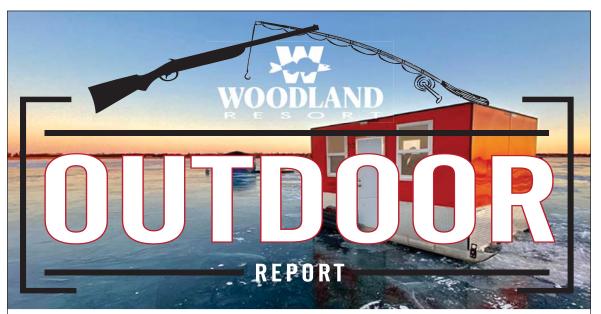

- 4 (4 OZ EACH) SALMON, SKIN-ON, PIN
- KOSHER SALT AND FRESHLY GROUND BLACK PEPPER
- 2/3 BUNCH ASPARAGUS, BOTTOM THIRDS OF STALKS REMOVED AND SLICED INTO 1 INCH PIECES ON THE BIAS
- 2/3 POUND SUGAR SNAP PEAS, ENDS TRIMMED AND SLICED INTO ½ INCH PIECES ON THE BIAS
- 6 2/3 OUNCE CHERRY TOMATOES, RINSED
- 1 1/3 LEMONS, HALVED
- 1/3 CUP FRESH PESTO 2/3 LEMON, ZESTED FRESH BASIL LEAVES, FOR GARNISH

When ready to cook, set Traeger temperature to 500°F and preheat, lid closed for 15 minutes. Place a piece of parchment paper on a large baking sheet or in a roasting nan Rinse the salmon and nat dry Brush all sides of the salmon with olive oil, and sprinkle generously with salt and black pepper on all sides. Place the salmon pieces skin-side up on the sheet tray leaving 2 inches between each piece. Place the asparagus, snap peas, and cherry tomatoes in a bowl. Gently mix the vegetables with the remaining tablespoon of olive oil, 1/2 teaspoon salt and a fresh grinding of pepper. Scatter the vegetables evenly onto the sheet pan. Place the sheet pan on the grill. In addition, place the lemons cut-side down directly on the grill grate towards the front of the grill. Close the lid and cook for 5 minutes. After 5 minutes, remove the lemons from the grill and stir the vegetables. Close the lid and cook for 5 more minutes, or until the fish reaches an internal temperature of 140°F and can be flaked with a fork.

Remove the sheet pan from the grill. Place the fish and vegetables on a serving platter and drizzle with the pesto. Squeeze the grilled lemon over the top of the fish and vegetables. Sprinkle the lemon zest over the fish and add a few basil leaves for garnish. Serve immediately.

MINOT AFB ANNOUNCEMENTS

EMBRY-RIDDLE AERONAUTICAL UNIVERSITY

Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University is the world's pre-eminent university for aviation and aerospace education. However, our dynamic, hands-on programs will prepare you for careers well beyond the limits of the sky. Our Worldwide Campus has been working with U.S. military service members since 1970, helping them to earn a degree while on active duty or as veterans. And we do it at more than 90 military installations around the globe. The Embry-Riddle Minot Campus — located at Minot Air Force Base — offers associate, bachelor's, and master's degrees, as well as undergraduate and graduate certifications, that will help you whether you are an active-duty military service member, a veteran, or a civilian working at or around Minot Air Force Base, Embry-Riddle Worldwide is here to help you earn your college degree. A degree from Embry-Riddle Worldwide will help service members to become commissioned officers, will make veterans more desirable job candidates as they enter the civilian workforce, and will assist civilians with job advancement or career changes. Our modes of instruction are: Online, Eaglevision Home and Eaglevision Classroom. Our next upcoming term: 8 Jan-10 Mar. For more information, please visit us in Room 223 located in the Base Education Center Building (2nd floor), email: minot@erau.edu or call office phone: 701-727-9007.

The Grand Prize winner, who would also win the coveted Family 5 Pack to Bottineau Winter Park including lift tickets and equipment rentals, was chosen at random from the pool of entries and awarded to Emily Marsh! Emily and her family (pictured) were very excited to win.

She said her favorite part of Minot in the winter is "...it brings an opportunity for connection and adventure for me and my family. Winter forces us to find ways to connect indoors, find ways to explore outdoors, and we've made some really beautiful memories sledding, playing hockey, sipping hot cocoa and snuggling up for a movie, and even shoveling.... how the pace of life is just a little bit slower here."

FLING INTO SPRING -WITH POLLINATORS???

Patricia Stockdill

While it's not quite yet official because we haven't hit the March 19 Spring Equinox, it's here. Spring is here.

We know it's here because the sun is higher in the sky. daylight hours are lengthening, and someone deemed Daylight Savings Time should take place in March a week before St. Patrick's Dav.

The wonderful season of Spring tends to bring optimism to North Dakotans, even with its mud and the coming of wood ticks.

That's because we North Dakotans tend to be eternal optimists.

Perhaps it's out of necessity as we deal with our everchanging weather and the weird things it brings.

That's why farmers plant crops, gardeners garden, and wildlife enthusiasts treasure their first glimpse of a bluebird, purple martin, or mallard.

We're optimistic spring really is here.

But, good heavens, the way the winter of 2023-2024 we could be forgiven if it felt like as if spring arrived as soon as snow melted after that darned October 2023 storm.

OK, we had a midwinter cold spell when Mother Nature proved to us that she, once again, doesn't want folks to forget she can make it minus 20 or minus degrees pretty much at her will.

She's very good at reminding us not to get complacent and, above all, to appreciate those beautiful days she gives us. Otherwise, lest we forget, she'll toss in another reminder with some really icky weather.

But we're nearly halfway towards April and we need to keep that reminder in our memory bank - Mother Nature can still slam us with spring storms to rise up and bite North Dakota once again.

In the meantime, wildlife lovers can focus on spring and summer, planning and plotting what could be done to make life better for the critters we love and cherish and ways to get out and explore the awakening of spring and the new life it brings.

Speaking of spring and planning for planting, even little things such as adding planters of flowers or even vegetable provides a boost for critters, especially pollinating insects.

The role pollinating insects, including native bees, play in the human food chain is pretty amazing.

The number and types of food humans consume that are dependent on pollination is much greater than one would envision - just consider that bee pollination prevents misshapen fruit in raspberries and strawberries - better, more tasty, and healthier to eat and enjoy. .

It's not too difficult to provide shelter for some native pollinators simply by leaving a little garden or vegetation litter when spring yard cleaning.

Even leaving vegetation in container gardens in the fll could over-winter some pollinators.

Also, native bees just might adopt a shelter if one is available.

Native bees don't sting.

They're also pretty solitary

And they pollinate a large percentage of the food people consume.

Simply go to North Dakota State University Extension Service's website link, (www.ndsu.edu/agriculture/ extension/extension-topics/gardening-andhorticulture/pollinators) for an array of information. The thing about the NDSU site it it's tailored to North Dakota's climate and environment. What grows elsewhere may or may not work well in Northern Great Plains soils and weather. Heck, even that varies greatly within the state.

With a little creativity, those hints, tips, and informational tidbits could be downsized to fit one's available space.

As much as anything it's a great way to engage children, especially in a downsized garden or container space they could call their own.

Getting ideas, planning, and plotting for a pollinatorfriendly landscape is a great way to reinforce the fact that, yes, North Dakotans are eternal optimists.

And it's spring.

Well, it will officially be spring. Soon.

Just think of spring like this quote by Lewis Grizzard in "Kathy Sue Loudermilk, I Love You" - " Springtime is the land awakening. The March winds are the morning
