Grandparents Christmas aftermath

BY KATHY TANDEBRG

It's quiet in our house today, now that Christmas is over for another year. But then our house is usually quieter this time of year in the aftermath of Christmas now that we live closer to two of our daughters and families.

I look out my office window at a sea of white skies, soft, fluffy snow falling to the ground. It's a perfect day to stay inside, but I know some grandkids that will be ready to get their sleds out this afternoon.

I don't even hear any vehicles driving through our neighborhood. It's so quiet you could hear a pin drop.

Living close to some of our children means the need to stay overnight during Christmas no longer exists, which means the washing machine is quiet today because we have no extra bedding or towels to wash.

While they didn't drive for a couple hours or more to come home for Christmas, we will, however, have a grandchild or two sleepover during the school break. The granddaughters still want to bake more cookies at Grandma's house!

With family living so close, there's also no need to clean out the refrigerator from all the leftovers because we didn't host Christmas Eve/Day dinner this year, which means we have no leftovers. The younger generation cooked the meals and we took our contributions to their homes. If there was anything left, it stayed

We do have the sounds of the pitter-patter of little feet though, the four little feet of one of our granddogs, the mini-daschund Ella. Her family is now in sunny but not so warm Arizona visiting the other grandparents.

Ella is happily cozy in either my lap under a blanket, or on the lap of the hands that feed her all kinds of extra treats like jerky, and, well anything the grandpa in our house is eating: salmon patties, lefse, steak and even a grape here or there. Don't worry, these are tiny bites because she is a tiny dog of 11 years.

I know we're not the only grandparents who have quieter houses, but you know, we are perfectly OK with that because there is so much less to do to get the house ready and then to undo it and put it back together once everyone goes home again.

Oh, who am I kidding! I do miss having a houseful for a little while. That's how my family home was when I was a child. With five brothers and lot of aunts, uncles, cousins and neighbors sharing the holidays it's hard to get totally accustom to a quieter house. My parents and my husband's parents went through it and now it's our

Don't get me wrong, we are not abandoned. We see our North Dakota kids and grandkids every week. Our south daughter and family usually come home when it's warmer in the summertime, though they come for a taste of snow from time to time. Then we go there for a taste of warmer as well!

After the New Year has passed I'll once again have a busy house for a little while because I'll be putting out the word that Grandpa and Grandma could use help to undecorate the house from Christmas.

It goes so much quicker when there are younger hands and feet to bring everything to me while I pack it up for next year. It also helps clean out the last of those Christmas goodies in the kitchen.

A New Year is just around the corner! It's still hard for me to wrap my mind around the number 2019. For our family, 2019 won't come too soon. It means in just four weeks our grandson will be returning home from the Middle East with his squadron. It will be a blessing to have him home safe and sound away from bombs and terrorists.

May each day of the New Year bring you luck, joy, happiness and prosperity. Here's wishing you and your family a happy New

Blizzard Bluegrass next weekend

BY ALYSSA MEIER BHG News

Blizzard Bluegrass will return to Bismarck State College next weekend for the 14th annual Washburn-area band Cotton Wood will be one of two acts performing during the two-day event, scheduled for Jan. 11 and 12. The band also host of the event, with bassist Jill Wiese serving as one of the organizers.

Wiese said she is excited for Cotton Wood to open for headliner Special Consensus, who is set to perform in the evening on both days.

"We are a band now for 18 years and are so excited to be opening for one of the best bands in the country," Wiese said.
The Special Consensus, a grammy nominee and recipient of the Best Bluegrass album of the year and best instrumental song of the year from the International Bluegrass Music Association, will also lead a workshop on Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4

"To be able to sit down with (thee) best musicians/singers of bluegrass music in this country in Bismarck, N.D. is just priceless," Wiese said.

Wiese said she hoped to see both bluegrass enthusiasts and first timers come to the event.

"I feel people who have never heard bluegrass music before should very definitely attend as each year we visit with the 'new people' to bluegrass music and they are always so very surprised at how well everyone performs and is able to song-write and sing harmony as well as play their instruments so well," Wiese said.
A concert will also take place

Friday morning at the N.D. Youth Correctional Center in Mandan, with Cotton Wood donating two new guitars to the school's music program.

Tickets to Blizzard Bluegrass are $15 each. The concert will take place at BSC's Sydney J. Lee auditorium on both nights.

The event is sponsored by H.A. Thompson and Son's-Mark and Claudia Thompson of Bismarck, and is supported by North Dakota Council on the Arts and Dakota West Arts councils financial grants.

Gardening Tips

Petunia's choice

BY BEV JOHNSON M.G. University of Minnesota Extension Master Gardener

Petunia likes fresh flowers on her table every day. This can get expensive if she buys all of them from the florist, so this summer Bunkey is going to grow a cutting garden for her. To be sure that her garden bouquets fit her fancy, he gave her a Christmas gift of a class on arranging flowers. This resulted in one of their closets turning into a flower arranging area. It is fitted with many shapes of vases, frogs, clippers and books on flowers. Now it's up to Bunkey to supply the flowers. To that end he has been perusing the seed catalogs that keep showing up in the mailbox from December to March. Cut flowers must generally have a fairly long stem. That means he is looking for tall flowers and those that last after cutting. He plans to plant: several varieties of asters, bells of Ireland, calendula, the taller carnations, clarkia, the short cleome as the tall ones get 2 to 3 feet and take up a lot of room, cosmos, bachelor buttons for filler, dahlias, short sunflowers, tall lobelia, annual larkspur, several types of snapdragons, gloriosa daisy, sweet peas and at least 3 types of zinnia. Some of these he will direct seed, some he will get from the local nurseries as they need to be started indoors for summer bloom. If he can find lissianthus, a favorite of Petunias, he will buy at least 12 of them. These tall plants produce a white, pink or blue flower that looks like a rose. They last several weeks when cut and aren't very fussy as long as they get full sun and are watered regularly. The problem with them is that they are quite expensive for an annual as they take months in a green house before they are ready to bloom. Marigolds can be cut but not too many people like the strong smell of them, especially on the dining room table. Daffodils and iris also have strong smelling flowers but more pleasant to the nose.

Of course there are many perennials that are great cut flowers. The problem with them is that most of them only bloom for about 10 days to 2 weeks while annuals, if religiously deadheaded, will bloom from planting to frost. Snapdragons will even bloom after that and still look good. Mums that have been frosted will develop a brown center. OK if they are dark colors but the light-colored ones look half dead. Annual flowers, on a row around the vegetable garden do double duty. They not only brighten up the area, the blooms attract pollinators. If you have an area you can contain her, plant Queen Ann's Lace, a strong draw for lady bugs. They lay eggs on umbrella type blooms. The little dragon looking larvae are bottomless eaters cleaning up any critters smaller than they are. Queen Ann is a voracious spreader. She is biannual, beautiful, a heavy seed producer and will pop up every place you don't want her unless you can plant her well away from any cultivated soil.

While Bunkey is busy planning next summers' cutting garden, Petunia keeps buying florist bouquets. That 10$ bite every week hurts Bunkey right in the wallet. Wait till he buys all those seed packets at 2 to 4 dollars apiece. His wallet will be begging for help.

Germann joins Leader-News staff

The new year brings in a new reporter for the Leader-News. Machaela Germann will be covering news and sports in the Wilton area.

Germann grew up in Rhame, a small town in the South West corner of the state. Germann graduated high school from Bowman County in 2017 and obtained her Associates of Arts degree from Bismarck State College in 2018.

"When I was attending BSC, I had an amazing advisor that pushed me out of my comfort zone and got me into writing for the student newspaper," Germann axid

She wrote a column called "Small Town Struggle," and worked as a general reporter during her last two semesters for The Mystician.

While pursuing a job in Communications, it only seemed fitting for Germann to write for a small town newspaper.

"I love the small town feeling and having genuine relationships with the people in the community. All small towns have their own unique quirks that make living there fun," Germann said. "I look forward to writing stories for all of the readers and getting to know people."

Outside of writing, Germann's hobbies include hunting, kayaking and cheering on the Minnesota Vikings (even though that can be tough at times, she said). Germann also enjoys travelling all around the United States, with hopes to venture outside the country soon.

Beware of health scams in 2019

BY JULIE GARDEN-ROBINSON Food and Nutrition Specialist NDSU Extension

"Hi, this is your grandson," the caller said to a friend of mine.

"Oh, is this my grandson Sam?" she asked. "Yeah, yeah, this is Sam!" he responded.

"Well, I don't have a grandson named Sam," she told the caller before hanging up.

My friend is one clever woman. "We had someone call and say she was our granddaughter," another person said.

He doesn't have a granddaughter. These scam callers are looking for prey.

Scams are all around us. The scammers may approach us by phone, email, text or online. If you "bite," often they can affect your finances. Sometimes scams can affect your health.

At the start of a new year, diet promotions beckon us from many directions. Some diets promise rapid-fire weight loss through pills, teas, patches and exercise devices. Some programs promise weight loss in specific areas of your body. Others promise weight loss without effort, with fat melting from your body.

Yes, obesity remains a medical concern in the U.S., affecting an estimated 93 million people, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Carrying excess weight can increase our risk for high blood pressure, Type 2 diabetes, stroke and certain types of cancer.

However, miracle weight loss measures have no long-term success. In fact, if you see false claims, you can report scams to the Federal Trade Commission.

According to the National Institutes of Health, safe and successful weight-loss programs should include several factors. If you are contemplating paring some pounds in the new year, first see a health-care provider to discuss medical issues, medications, your current body mass index and a weight that is healthy for you.

Short-term fixes usually don't stick. In fact, the typical "gold standard" for weight loss is 14 sessions led by a trained professional during the course of at least six months.

Ask yourself these questions if you are considering a weight-loss plan:

• Does the plan include behavioral treatment, also called lifestyle counseling, which can teach you how to develop more healthful eating and physical activity habits? Many programs have you keep food and activity records or journals.

- Does the program provide information about getting enough sleep and managing stress?
- Does the program offer feedback, monitoring and support in person, by phone, online or through a combination of these approaches?
- Is the rate of intended weight loss slow and steady? In general, a weight loss of 1 to 2 pounds per week is more likely to be maintained.

We have two updated resources to promote health among men and women. Check out our two websites, "Healthwise for Guys" and "Healthwise for Women," which provide resources and links to promote good health and a healthy weight. Visit https:// www.ag.ndsu.edu/food for links to both sites.

If you get a "phishing" call, don't bite. If you are looking for diets that promote good health, consider the DASH diet, short for Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension, and the Mediterranean Diet. Both are among the top-rated healthpromoting diets, not necessarily weight-loss diets.

Both of these diets promote eating more vegetables, among many other things. Most of us fall short of eating enough vegetables, which are naturally low in calories.

Here's a tasty recipe featuring potassium-rich potatoes. No, potatoes aren't fattening, but be careful about loading them with high-calorie toppings or deepfrying them. A medium-sized potato including the peel has about 110 calories, plus fiber, vitamin C and other nutrients. Try roasting potatoes with another nutrition powerhouse, sweet potatoes, for a flavorful, satisfying side dish with your favorite protein food.

ROASTED PARMESAN GARLIC POTATOES

2 large red potatoes

1 large russet potato

1 large sweet potato

1 medium red onion 2 Tbsp. olive oil

2 Tbsp. unsalted butter, melted

5 cloves of garlic, minced

1 tsp. dried thyme

1/2 tsp. dried oregano

1/2 tsp. dried basil

1/3 c. freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1/8 tsp. salt

1/8 tsp. pepper

2 Tbsp. parsley leaves, chopped Preheat the oven to 425 F. Wash and slice potatoes and onion into 1/4-inch slices. In a round pie plate, line the potatoes and onion alternately. Try to match the size of potatoes and onions when arranging them in the pie plate. In a bowl, combine melted butter, olive oil, herbs, salt, pepper, Parmesan and minced garlic. Drizzle the mixture over the potato and onion round, brushing the herbs and Parmesan over the top. Place in the oven for one hour or until fork tender with crispy edges. Serve warm with a little fresh parsley and a dash of Parmesan.

AAA illuminates dangers of driving with clouded headlights

Deteriorated headlights produce 80 percent less light

New research from AAA reveals that clouded or yellowed headlights generate only 20 percent of the amount of light that new headlights do, leading to dangerous nighttime driving conditions. AAA urges drivers to check their headlights for signs of deterioration and invest in new headlights or, at a minimum, a low-cost service to boost the safety of driving after dark.

"Headlights, even when new, don't produce a sufficient amount of lighting for highway speeds," said Gene LaDoucer, North Dakota spokesman for AAA-The Auto Club Group. "Any reduction in performance of headlights is a real safety issue."

AAA examined the impact deterioration can have on the amount of light produced by conducting research using an accredited laboratory to test headlights from two popular sedans, approximately 11 years in age. Results from the degraded headlights were measured against new headlights to quantify the amount of light produced for each. All testing was done in accordance with the Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard 108 as set forth by the Department of Transportation.

Research revealed that deteriorated headlights, when used on low beam, provided just 22 percent of the amount of light a new headlight does when operating at full capacity. AAA also examined the effects that replacing or restoring a headlight can have on improving the amount of light produced. Replacing headlights with original equipment manufacturer parts is the most effective method to restore light output back to 100 percent.

Aftermarket parts also performed well, restoring light output between 83 and 90 percent;

however these did fail to meet certain requirements for light intensity and were found to be more likely to produce glare for oncoming traffic. Restoring headlights, while the most cost effective option, offered less of an improvement in light output than replacement. Professional and DIY restoration returned light output back to approximately 70 percent. Both restoration methods, however, produced more glare than is acceptable according DOT criteria.

Compounding the problem of driving with deteriorated headlights is the fact that U.S. headlights have significant shortcomings. Previous AAA research found that halogen headlights fail to safely illuminate unlit roadways at speeds as low as 40 mph, with high beam settings offering only marginal improvements. Even the most advanced headlights tested illuminated just 40 percent of the sight distances that the full light of day provides. By not maintaining headlights, drivers are unknowingly operating in dangerously dim conditions.

AAA RECOMMENDATIONS

• When driving at night on unlit roadways, use high beams whenever possible.

• Monitor and adjust driving speeds when traveling on unlit roads at night to allow enough time to detect, react and stop the vehicle in order to avoid striking pedestrians, animals or objects in the roadway.

• If your car's headlamp lenses are not crystal clear, have them restored, this will provide a noticeable increase in visibility, and reduce the glare from other motorists.

• If you are 60 or older and headlight glare is an issue, have your eyes checked by a medical professional. Cataracts that cloud the eye's lens may be contributing to the problem.

Unlike batteries or tires, most drivers are not in the habit of routinely inspecting their headlights. AAA suggests drivers check their headlights for changes in appearance such as yellowing or clouding. If the bulb is difficult to see, it is time to have the lenses replaced or restored. AAA recommends replacement since this method offers the most improvement in the amount of light produced. Both replacement and restoration services are provided by many repair shops, including many AAA Approved Auto Repair facilities.

METHODOLOGY

Headlight assemblies used in testing were for the left (driver's) side of the vehicle. To quantify headlight performance, AAA contracted an accredited testing laboratory with expertise in automotive headlights and conducted testing according to industry standards. Headlights were tested according to FMVSS-108 standards with no modifications to the headlight assemblies under test or to the test procedures.

The professional headlight restoration systems used a power sanding technique to remove the original protective film from the headlight lens. The resulting scratched surface of the polycarbonate was then polished using increasingly finer grades of sanding discs and a protectant film applied to the entire surface of the headlight lens. Full methodology available in the research report found here

N.D. 4-H archery circuit —A L&C Journal

Youth interested in archery can start signing up for the 2019 North Dakota 4-H archery competition

The North Dakota State University Extension Center for 4-H Youth Development's 4-H shooting sports program started the district circuit in the winter of 2014 after 4-H archers asked to do more than just practice.

The first match of the sixdistrict circuit kicks off in Jan. 12 at the Nishu Bowmen Archery Complex in Bismarck, N.D. Watford City, Minot, Cando, West Fargo and Edgeley host the other North Dakota circuit events.

The archery event consists of three age divisions for youth from 8 to 18 years old. Youth can participate in two bow divisions: freestyle unlimited and bare bow.

Here is a breakdown of what's required in each division:

Beginner, junior and senior bare bow - shoot six ends (rounds) of five arrows at an 80-centimeter (cm) target at 15 yards for a maximum score of 300

* Freestyle beginners and juniors - shoot six ends of five arrows at a 40-cm target for a $maximum\ score\ of\ 150$

Senior freestyle - shoot 12 ends of five arrows at a single bull target at 20 yards for a score of 300

Youth can participate in just one match or compete in more matches to qualify for the indoor championship in April.

The dates and locations for the other district matches are:

Jan. 26 - Watford City, Roughrider Events Center

Feb. 2 - Minot, North Dakota State Fairgrounds

* Feb. 23 - Cando, Extension office for Towner County

* March 9 - West Fargo, Red River Valley Fairgrounds

* March 30 - Edgeley, National Guard Armory

The 2019 4-H State Indoor Championship will be on April 13 at the Nishu Bowmen Archery Complex. Archers must participate the points needed to compete in the championship. The cost is $15 per match. Visit the 4-H website (http://www.

in two or more matches to score ndsu.edu/4h/) to register. "The North Dakota 4-H shooting sports program helps youth gain skills in goal setting and problem solving, as well as safe handling of shooting sports equipment,' says Adrian Biewer, the 4-H youth development specialist in NDSU Extension's Center for 4-H Youth Development who oversees the shooting sports program. "Youth also gain confidence and new friends through participation."

The circuit is popular and continues to grow. In 2014, it had 84 participants in the first match.

We are fast outgrowing some of our match locations," Biewer says. "Our 2018 state indoor championship attendance was over 200, with many youth competing in both bow divisions."

He reports that parents like the circuit. One family says a match is a fun weekend activity and uses the trip to a match as a mini-vacation. Another parent likes archery because it isn't like other sports; youth who attend get to play, rather than sitting on the bench, waiting to see if the coach will let them play.

Scheels is a sponsor of 4-H North Dakota Shooting Sports through the North Dakota 4-H Foundation.

GRE scholarships

Great River Energy, owner and operator of Coal Creek Station and Spiritwood Station, is once again offering scholarships for graduating seniors who are pursuing a four-year or vocationaltechnical degree in North Dakota. Applicants do not need to be related to a Great River Energy employee to apply.

This year, up to thirteen $1,000 scholarships will be awarded to graduating seniors from the following high schools in Oliver, Mercer, Stutsman and McLean Counties: Garrison, Max, Underwood, Turtle Lake-Mercer, Washburn, Wilton, Center-Stanton, Hazen, Beulah, Valley City, Barnes County North, Jamestown, and Montpelier.

Scholarship applications are available from guidance counselors at the above high schools, or at greatriver energy.com/we-are-acooperative/communitysupport/scholarships. For more information, contact Anne Hansen at ahansen@grenergy.com.

A brief respite

BY KEVIN KIRKEY Site Manager

On the eve of 1806, members of the Corps of Discovery had only been in their newly completed home for a little over a week. Not to rest on their recent accomplishment, they began to look forward to their continued journey up the Missouri River. On Dec. 31, Sergeant Ordway notes, "Three men went up to the 2nd village of Mandan in order to look in that bottom for timber to make pirogues." It seems they were steadfast in their mission of succeeding in crossing the continent, not just passing the days huddled around a fire. The New Year would soon be upon them and they were determined to be ready for their venture into the vast unknown between Fort Mandan and the Pacific Ocean.

On that New Year's Eve, the men of the expedition did not celebrate the past or make resolutions for the upcoming year. They did not overindulge in spirits or table fare. There was no party planning, not even a hunting party. Their neighbors were streaming through the doors loaded down with corn, beans, and squash as payment for the blacksmith's repair of their varied metal tools. That day was much like every other one in December. Not a hint of unconventionality surfaced in their journals.

However, on the morning of Jan. 1, the entire complement of men ushered in the New Year with the discharge of their cannon and a volley from their small arms. They drank a glass or two of whiskey and many of them made their way to the village closest to Fort Mandan carrying their fiddle, tambourine, and sounden horn. Emboldened by the liquid courage, the men played tunes and danced nearly all day to an audience of their neighbors. The following day they repeated the activities – minus the alcohol.

After two days of these amusements, the men returned to their assigned duties and began the preparations for their westward trek. Over the next three months, their tasks were focused and purposeful. They hunted in order to stockpile meat and hides. They smoked some of the meat and fashioned clothing and moccasins from the leather. They traded with their neighbors for produce grown the previous summer. They built canoes to transport their stores and belongings.

I hope that like the men of the Lewis & Clark Expedition, you took some time to reflect on the past year. With any luck, you celebrated a little before heading back to work or your usual responsibilities. It is important to take a little time now and then as a respite from the daily grind. Happy New
