Spring lawn care

BY CALLA EDWARDS
MCLEAN CO. EXTENSION AGENT

Spring Fever has officially arrived, both with the Spring Equinox on March 20th and with our current temperatures everyone is getting out into their yards and flowerbeds to get them ready for the growing season. After winter, often our lawns are looking less than perfect. Spring lawn and garden care often reminds me of the children's game Red Light, Green Light with the changes in temperature and yes the occasional late spring snow storm. In that spirit, here are some do's and don'ts of spring lawn care.

Green light

Rake up the debris and snow mold off your lawn

After the snow we had this winter our lawns might be flattened or matted and if your snow removal method was anything like mine, there are rocks, dirt and gravel scattered on the grass from attempts to keep our sidewalks clear this winter. To help facilitate quicker growth in your lawn be sure to rake up this material to make mowing easier for the year. Nothing is harder on your mower blades (and occasionally the windows of your house) than rocks in your yard. On that note, now is a good time to get your lawn mower ready for the year by sharpening your blades and changing your oil (if you didn't last year). Nothing is harder on a lawn than dull blades.

Green light

Thatch and compaction mitigation

As your lawn starts to green up, now is an excellent time to invigorate your lawn. Your first mowing of the year (and I've already heard lawn mowers out and about) should be shorter than your traditional lawn mowing height. This helps to clean up the clippings and leaves that might still be on your lawn. Bag the clippings from the first mowing to reduce thatch, but it is recommended to not bag your lawn clippings for the remainder of the mowing's. Your second step could be to use a spindle aerator. Your lawn should be aerated every three years or so, more if you have highly compacted or high clay soils. Aerating helps reduce thatch levels by approximately 10 percent and is needed in high traffic areas to reduce compaction and allow root growth. A final step could be to utilize a power rake to reduce thatch. Thatch levels are beneficial, however too much of a good thing is a bad thing. If your thatch layers get over 3/8" it is time to consider using a power rake. If you power rake your yard after aerating, the rake will help break up your plugs. Be sure to rake the resulting grass layer up otherwise it could shade out your yard.

Yellow light

Spring crabgrass preventer

It is still a bit too early in the season to be considering applying crabgrass preventer. Crabgrass is an annual warm season grass and seeds will only start sprouting when temperatures reach 60-70 degrees. Right now our soil temperatures range from 47-49 degrees according to the NDAWN stations. Wait to apply your crabgrass preventer until the soil temperatures are 50-55 degrees.

Red light

Spring fertilizer applications

The best time to fertilize your lawn is in the fall, however a spring application can have some benefits. Now is still too early to apply fertilizer to your lawn. Wait until the grass has fully greened up to apply your fertilizer. Our soil temperatures are still quite cool and turfgrass won't use the fertilizer till it is actively growing. Fertilizer applied too early is likely to run off and not help your lawn. Be sure to test the soil in your lawn to determine if a fertilizer application will be beneficial to your yard.

Spring lawn care can help you have a beautiful lawn this summer, however it is important to wait till the correct time to work in your yard. Be sure to wait till your lawn starts to green up to do the first mowing, aerating and power raking. Starting too soon can actually encourage weeds in the lawn as it opens up the canopy and allows sunlight to reach the weeds on the soil surface. It is also too early to be watering our lawns. Watering your lawn too soon can actually be detrimental when the summer heat and potential dry season arrives. Lawn grasses should develop a deep root system to protect against drought and heat, watering it too soon doesn't allow this to happen. Be sure when you start watering your lawn that you do so deeply and infrequently to encourage root growth. I know we all want a beautiful green lawn as early as possible, but time and proper care now will pay dividends later this year. Check out our Facebook Page "NDSU Extension- McLean County" or call our office at 701-462-8541. Happy Growing!!!!

Plan for long-term care

BY MICHELLE EFFERTZ
4-H YOUTH EXTENSION AGENT

No one wants to envision spending their later years living in a nursing home or being dependent on the help of others to live at home, yet most Americans will need long-term care at some point in their lives. Planning for long-term care needs is crucial for financial security and peace of mind. Long-term care is an umbrella term for services and supports designed to help people live independently on a daily basis, such as eating, bathing and dressing, either in a care facility or one's home. A misconception is that health insurance, Medicare or disability insurance cover these services, but they do not.

Medicaid does cover long-term care services, but you only qualify if your income and assets do not exceed levels set by your state. You can purchase long-term care insurance, annuities or other hybrid or combination products. The other option is to pay for it with savings, pensions or income from investments.

According to the Genworth 2017 Cost of Care Survey, the national median annual cost for long-term care ranges from $47,934 to $97,455, depending on the type of care needed. Paying for long-term care may be one of the largest financial investments a person or the person's family will make.

To start the planning process, here are some important steps:

- Think about your ultimate goals for where you want to live and how you will receive care, should you need it.
- Consider your unique needs, such as risk factors for long-term care. Risk factors include age, gender, disability, health status and living situation.
- Understand the range of long-term care services and supports, including home care, adult day care, assisted living and nursing homes.
- Do the research so you know the costs of long-term care services in your community.
- Determine what financial resources you have to cover long-term care and address any gaps in financing before you need it.

Planning for long-term care needs is not just about you. It is really a family plan because it impacts the lives of those who care about you, too.

Are you inspired to do some spring cleaning?

BY JULIE GARDEN-ROBINSON
FOOD AND NUTRITION SPECIALIST
NDSU EXTENSION

As I looked around my office, the inspiration for this weekly column was right in front of me. Spring cleaning needs to be on my to-do list.

Fortunately, my office isn't dusty, and the carpet was vacuumed recently. However, piles of paper accumulated on my desk and table during the winter, just like the deep piles of snow that I could see through my office window.

Unfortunately, my stacks of paper haven't melted and disappeared.

I need to deal with the clutter and recycle some paper. I probably need to set a goal to deal with things digitally more often.

However, I can ignore things I can't see, which isn't always a good approach.

During this time of year, cleaning tends to be on people's minds. We might drive around neighborhoods and see potential treasures on boulevards during spring clean-up week. Garage sales pop up as people clear their clutter after winter.

Raise your hand if cleaning your house is your favorite thing to do. Although cleaning may not be everyone's favorite activity, cleaning has some real advantages.

Personally, I feel a strong sense of satisfaction when I clean a space. I always clear my desk and straighten my house before going to a conference or on a vacation. When I return to a fairly organized space, I'm inspired to unpack and catch up with everything I missed.

In fact, cleaning can be good for your health in several ways, according to researchers.

Having an uncluttered environment is good for your mental health, according to psychology researchers. Being surrounded by piles of stuff is stressful and can make concentrating on your real tasks more difficult.

Besides mental health benefits, cleaning also may help promote physical health. A research team from Indiana University noted that people with cleaner homes were healthier and more physically active.

Cleaning can burn calories. For example, a 150-pound person doing light housework burns about 90 calories in 30 minutes. Mopping for 30 minutes burns about 150 calories, which is about the same amount you burn during a 30-minute walk.

Cleaning also can reduce illness-causing bacteria, especially in your kitchen. Several types of illness-causing bacteria may be lurking on your kitchen surfaces.

Unfortunately, unlike stacks of paper and a layer of dust, you can't see bacteria with your bare eyes. You can't smell or taste the most dangerous types of bacteria, either.

According to the Fight BAC campaign (short for "bacteria"), disease-causing bacteria such as salmonella, Staphylococcus, E. coli and/or listeria may inhabit our kitchens. Bacteria may arrive on raw chicken, meat, eggs or other protein-rich foods.

Bacteria can be transferred around your kitchen on other foods, such as salads, and by hands, cutting boards or knives. Bacteria also might hitch a ride on a used washcloth, towel or sponge.

Keep these cleaning tips in mind all year. Learn more about the national Fight BAC campaign at <https://www.fightbac.org>.

- Wash surfaces, such as countertops and cutting boards, thoroughly with hot water and soap.

- Follow the washing step with a sanitizing step, which further reduces the presence of bacteria. You can use a commercial disinfecting spray or make your own sanitizing solution. Prepare a chlorine bleach solution consisting of 3/4 teaspoon of unscented chlorine bleach per quart of water or 1 tablespoon of bleach per gallon of water. Apply to the surface, and let the bleach-water solution stand on the surface for several minutes.

Then rinse and air dry.

- Consider using paper towels to clean kitchen surfaces. If you use cloth towels, wash them in the hot cycle of your washing machine. Beware of kitchen sponges, which can harbor bacteria. If you like sponges, replace them often.

- Check out your refrigerator. Does it need cleaning? Experts recommend cleaning your refrigerator weekly to decrease germs that can contaminate foods. Clean the interior refrigerator surfaces with hot water and soap, rinse with a damp cloth and dry with a clean cloth. In this case, avoid using chlorine bleach, solvent cleaning solutions or abrasives because they could damage seals, gaskets and linings.

- Clean your kitchen sink, drain and disposal once or twice a week with warm water and soap. Disinfect the drain and disposal by pouring in a solution of 3/4 teaspoon chlorine bleach per quart of water.

- Inspect the inside of your microwave oven. Are there spills? Heat a microwave-safe bowl filled with water on high for about 4 minutes. Remove the bowl, and use the hot water and dish soap to wipe down the microwave interior. Dry with a fresh paper towel.

Here's a recipe that might help you use up some ingredients in your cupboard or refrigerator. Lentils, which have a long shelf life, are good sources of both protein and fiber. Eggs, by the way, are good about three weeks beyond the date on the package if kept cold. See <https://www.ag.ndsu.edu/food> for more information about food safety and preparation.

Lentil and veggie cheddar bake

1 c. red lentils

2 c. water

3/4 c. cheddar cheese

1/2 red bell pepper, finely chopped

1/2 green bell pepper, finely chopped

1 small onion, finely chopped

2 cloves of garlic, crushed

Black pepper and salt to season

4 eggs

Preheat oven to 350 F. Bring red lentils and water to a boil in a saucepan. Reduce heat to simmer. Cover and cook until water is almost absorbed, turn off heat, add lid and leave for 10 minutes to soak up any remaining liquid. In the meantime, spray a frying pan with spray oil and cook the onion, peppers and garlic for about 4 minutes. Once lentils are ready, add them to a bowl. Add the onion, red pepper, green pepper and garlic, then season with salt and pepper. Add the cheddar and eggs, and mix thoroughly. Spray an 8-inch round pan with cooking spray, add the mixture and bake in the oven until it is golden and set, about 30 to 40 minutes.

Makes eight servings. Each (1/8 slice) serving has 150 calories, 3.5 g fat, 13 g protein, 17 g carbohydrate, 4 g fiber and 135 mg sodium.

Gardening Tips

Spring bugs

BY BEV JOHNSON M.G.
UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA EXTENSION MASTER GARDENER

Petunia hates bugs! That makes this time of year especially difficult for her as it seems her house has been invaded this spring. Her first encounter was house centipede. These creepy fellows have 15 pairs of legs, are brownish yellow with dark stripes on a flattened body. They move very fast, darting into cracks and other tight spaces. They sneak in through small cracks in the foundation and although they prefer damp places, they can be found most anywhere in a house. They are actually one of the "good guys" as they prey on other insects and related arthropods. Basement spiders, AKA Daddy Longlegs, are another predator Petunia found. The one in her bathtub almost made her swear off bathing. These spiders leave hunks of skeletons of their food in webs, so if you find a small web full of dark round hunks, you too have basement spiders. You can just smack these 2 with a shoe when you encounter them. To at least partially eliminate the centipedes, you will need to dry out the area you find them in. Sticky traps work well too. The next step is to examine the foundation. Remove any leaves or other debris that is lying next to the foundation and calk up any cracks. A crack doesn't need to be very large to let a sneaky critter like a centipede in. Indoors, dry out the area with a fan or dehumidifier. Petunia wants immediate action, so she headed to the ant spray. This will get the ones she sees at least.

Another insect she may encounter this spring is a pinhead sized red mite. These minute creatures are clover mites. They are cousins to spiders and ticks. They live in the grass, feeding on the sap of grass, clover and other plants. They don't do any damage outside. Last fall some of them decided to spend their winter vacation in Petunia's house. They crept in to small cracks with the lady bugs already resting there. Her house is about 100 years old, so it has a lot of cracks and odd living spaces for winter and summer renters. The mites are harmless and are easily eliminated as are the lady bugs, with just a swipe of the vacuum cleaner. Bunkey had a flowerbed all around the foundation of the house, however, he had mulched it with wood chips, a perfect bridge into the house for a host of bugs. This spring he will only use eaves for mulch around the house and pull all of it off in the fall.

A Yellow Jacket colony moved into the wall void in the house last spring. Petunia freaked out all summer. She wanted the hole they were entering plugged up. Bunkey got her to listen to George about why that was a very bad idea. They will move into the house if they can't get outside, he told her. She sent Bunkey out as soon as the weather warmed up to calk up the entrance. The colony dies in the winter, but the queen doesn't, and she just may decide that was a nice place last summer, and move back in.

Just to be sure he has enough, our hero bought a case of calking this spring. He has been seen on his knees crawling around the foundation with a calk gun in his hand, almost every warm day this spring. He would do most anything not to hear that scream when Petunia encounters a bug.
