Getting the scoop at a new Stanton restaurant

By DANIEL ARENS

Looking for a tasty treat to go with that tasty tidbit of news? Stanton has the place for you.

Inside Scope, a new ice cream shop, is now open for business right along the highway, in the same location as Café DuMond was located in the past.

For the last couple years, Stanton residents and regular visitors have mourned the loss of that cafe, a nice restaurant to stop at right along County 37. Among those many is that restaurant's owner, Cassandra DuMond.

DuMond said the possibility of reopening a restaurant in some capacity has been something she's thought on and off about ever since she closed up the cafe. However, the possibility began to look more like a reality after Stanton Mayor Ron Boyko offered to find her a cooler used to serve ice cream.

"That's where it all started," she said.

For DuMond, an ice cream store offers her the seasonal option that is necessary for her, since she is a cook at the Center-Stanton School District. "In the summer I need a job," she said. "This gives me something to do."

Inside Scoop will be open Tuesdays through Sundays from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., although DuMond added they will stay open til everyone's served if there's a busy evening on a Friday or Saturday. The seasonal restaurant will continue these hours until the start of the next school year when, as summer wanes, DuMond turns her focus back to cooking at school, and will then reopen once school lets out the following spring.

DuMond said she hopes Inside Scoop will have its ordered soft serve machine this week, expanding the options the restaurant can provide. For the ice cream in the cooler, she said there will always be eight flavors on hand. Some staple flavors will be available at any time, while others will be rotated to provide a greater variety in what customers can enjoy.

"We will be able to offer cones, Sundays, some novelties, all that stuff," she said. "We'll also have some light lunches available, like hot dishes, cold sandwiches and soups."

There will be lunch specials at low prices, allowing patrons to get their lunch along with the most important part: the dessert.

"We've gotta leave room for ice cream," she added, laughing.

DuMond plans to celebrate the opening of the restaurant with a grand opening June 29, with door prizes and $1 soft serve cones.

In addition, DuMond is using the reopening as a means of offering more options to the community. She will have copies of the Hazen Star and Center Republican that can be purchased there, giving an additional meaning to the "Inside Scoop" name. Also, Stanton resident Jesse Krieger will have smoked meats available Fridays and Saturdays at the location as well.

Inside Scoop officially opened June 13.

"We've brightened it up inside," DuMond said.

Cassandra DuMond is receiving lots of help from her family: her husband Dan and their daughters Katie and Aspen. Hallie Sailer is the other employee at the restaurant.

To contact Inside Scoop, you can call the restaurant at 745-3535.

Prairie Dog and possible city infrastructure

By DIANE NEWBERRY

With a plucky name and strong support from leadership in the North Dakota legislature, "Operation Prairie Dog" dominated headlines and discussion throughout this legislative session.

The bill, with funding reliant upon oil prices and production, allocates up to $115 million to cities and $115 million to counties and townships. Distributions are based on populations and property valuations.

"Nothing is for sure yet, but it will be coming," Heather Ferebee, city auditor, said of Beulah's piece of the pie.

According to Ferebee, Beulah is projected to be getting about one million dollars, but the city won't know the exact amount until the money is awarded. The city is supposed to get part of the sum in 2020, with the rest coming in 2021.

While serious planning will not happen until the city is assured of its funds, City Engineer Charles Hankins is already in the process of assessing the Beulah's needs and creating a short list of priorities.

According to Hankins, the first thing that should always be addressed is what lies below.

"Our planning efforts will focus on primarily starting with the backbone of our water network and our sewer network," Hankins said. "So down Main Street, perhaps up Central Avenue and then we can kind of spider out from there and address areas, but there's a lot of steps that go with that."

Hankins said the "ultimate goal" is to ensure that the pipes beneath roads will not have to be replaced for a few decades "so we're not having to dig up a brand-new street." His main concern is with the water system, which has had several breaks this spring in the oldest part of town, 3rd Street South, which is fed off the water tower that serves the central part of town. The water tower and system were built in 1928.

"Now addressing that in all likelihood, just opening it up, digging up the ground and replacing it is probably the best option," Hankins said.

This would be an extensive project without visible results, but Hankins said it could save a tremendous amount of money in the future.

"It's a growing concern of mine and it should be a growing concern of the city's," Hankins said. "If we don't address it, eventually the problems are going to persist and it will become a problem of much greater magnitude down the road."

Hankins also said the sewer system, while not having the obvious problems the water system does, is up to 80 or 90 years old in some areas. Hankins said the sewers will need to be surveyed to see if they have gotten brittle in some areas and there may be small improvements that could be made without digging up the entire system.

Mayor Travis Frey said the process of deciding what projects to take on will take "several years," but he doesn't yet know if there will be a dedicated committee or simply a meeting of portfolio holders in water, sewer and roads.

"Generally, if you start with a couple people to do the legwork and bring some options to the (city) council, it's a little easier," Frey said.

Any project that will be undertaken has to be approved by city council and will have to be under very specific infrastructure guidelines as outlined by the "Operation Prairie Dog" bill.

The Fourth is time to remember who we are

In the last two years, since Donald Trump was elected president, we have seen people, so awash in their resentment and hatred for him, that in order to beat him in the 2020 election, they are willing to slander our own country. And, in doing so, slander and degrade every American who served in our military, fought and died in defense of our country and who we are. It should be offensive to every American, whether one served or not, to be compared to Nazi Germany and who those people were and what they did to Jews and a number of other victims. For a presidential candidate, or anyone else, to infer that the detention centers used on our southern border to deal with the people flooding into this country illegally, are no better than Nazi concentration camps should be an affront to any American with a conscience.

It may not be the best solution or the best set up, but there are no trains hauling people into these places against their will and there are no ashes falling from the sky, fallout from the crematory ovens used to dispose of the bodies of those murdered at the direction of our government.

Quite frankly, it really pisses me off, when someone stands up and declares America is no better than the most evil governmental regime witnessed in modern times. We have met the enemies and they are not us. Right now, the world is inching closer and closer to major conflict with Iran at the center of it all. Allied with Iran are Russia, China and North Korea, not to name a number of lesser players.

It is the largest hostile force ever aligned against us. This isn't invading Iraq. We are talking about major warfare that will decide the freedom and dependence of America. If the people, who would call us Nazis, are those who will rally the nation around the flag, we might as well pull down the red, white and blue and send up the white one.

TRACKS IN THE SAND KEN BEAUCHAMP

Then all these wildly innocent-in-the-head politicians can get together to remember who we once were because we remembered who we had once been. They can listen to the old timers talk about how we once celebrated our independence on the Fourth of July, back before the people with thoughts only of themselves and their friends gave away the strength of the nation.

It is time these people seeking the national stage realize that one needs to pause and listen to the noise coming from ones' own mouth. Words matter as much as actions and our words and actions are poised to destroy this country, which is already so divided that it must seem easy prey to our enemies, who band together and join us in demonizing America. Will anyone who stands up and calls his or her country the equal of Nazi Germany stand and fight to preserve the freedom and independence that guarantees that right to slander and criticize? You want them coming to back you up? These are the people who are great at standing up until called upon by name and then they stand back.

What is worse, they call upon and invoke the names and legacies of people in American history who did not stand back, but bravely stood up. And gladly paid the price for it. They shame the names of those good Americans who stood up in the struggles to make those rights we have on paper a reality in day to day life.

We like to say that, "freedom ain't free." Well, to one hell of a lot of these people, who spew forth without thinking of the unforeseen and unintended consequences of their words and actions, freedom is free. They have invested nothing beyond their own selfish interests to be Americans. It has been all gain and no pain for too many people, and maybe that is why they tend to forget who we are in America.

You could ask parents caring for a son or daughter in their home after that child was severely head injured in Iraq if they feel like Nazis. In Nazi Germany they killed those kinds of people, too. Ask an American who cares about its citizens, about someone's children sacrificed to war, what they've done for those people to rival the humanitarian giving they expect for the people America is accused of putting into concentration camps on our border.

We didn't just show up here on this Fourth of July, 2019. We arrived via a long and troublesome journey laced with pain and sacrifice. Freedom isn't free, not even cheap. Loose talk is cheap. I hope we will remain smart enough to know the difference and committed enough to care.

Regional airport's fly-in open to all lovers of pancakes and aviation

BY DIANE NEWBERRY

Hazen's quaint portal to the friendly skies will be hosting its annual "Fly-In" on Saturday for people of all ages to learn more about the Mercer County Regional Airport.

The airport, which "most people just call the Hazen Airport," according to airport authority member Ron Muth, has been hosting the fly-in in conjunction with the Hazen Fire Department for at least the last 15 years as a fundraiser for the department and awareness campaign for the airport.

"I just invite people to come out and take a look at the facility," Steve Frovarp, airport clerk, said. "There have been people who come and say, 'Gee we've never been out here before - didn't know it was this nice of a facility.'"

The event will be held from 7 a.m. to noon and the fire department will be cooking up and serving pancakes and sausage furnished by the airport. Though it's called a "fly-in," one doesn't need to be a wealthy jetsetter to attend.

"We serve right around 400 people and a lot of people don't have a plane, they just come out for breakfast," Muth said.

Still, Muth said he expects anywhere from 15 to 40 planes to attend based on previous years.

"Hopefully we get enough planes and pilots that we give free rides to the kids," Muth said, as one of the goals of the event is to get young people interested in aviation.

Frovarp said the airport has a rich history, part of which can be seen on display in the form of a Lockheed SR-71 Blackbird. The airport's field is named after Hazen native Al Joersz, who holds the flight speed record in the Blackbird.

All are invited to experience this piece of history, as well as other exciting displays of aviation (including an air ambulance and helicopter) on Saturday morning.
