Ahhh! The sweet aroma of a dead horse

If all the folks serving in the government in Washington were cow persons, instead of CSI wannabes, they would know an age old wisdom. You need to know when to dismount a dead horse, pull your saddle and head for home. Or where ever you're still welcome.

WHEN YOU'RE HORSE IS DEAD, IT IS DEAD. YOU CAN BUILD A FIRE AND COOK YOUR DEAD HORSE, BUT IT DOES NO GOOD TO CONTINUE TO BEAT AND BERATE YOUR DEAD HORSE TO GET UP AND LIVE. I don't think Jesus ever raised a dead horse. But, there is no measuring the vanity of this bunch in Washington, who clearly believe the largest letters in "team" are "we." Forgive me, but I'm tired.

Yes, folks. We have reached that point in politics and government where there is a simple answer to "why?" Simple. There just is no right way anymore. Reason has followed common sense into the grave and strife, conflict and confusion reign. Isn't it amazing? Our elected officials appear to be unable to agree on the borders of the United States. Yet, for some miraculous reason, life goes on and some degree of functionality still remains. You'd think, listening to the television and reading the papers, that a massive tornado hit the country and everything is literally "up in the air."

So, let me tell you a boring story about why I think the elected government can't ruin the country. First off, pictures of drowned children on the southern border don't drive everyone to hate their country. Consider that America has been here for a very long time. The Rio Grande River has been where it is for even longer. Blaming America, or the river, for the death of that man and his daughter, is just wrong. The fault here lies with a bad personal, although perhaps desperate decision, to risk everything. But, if I go out to Beaver Bay and decide to swim across, knowing the challenge and risk, as related to my ability to complete the challenge, then die in the process, do you blame me or Beaver Bay? I can promise you that Beaver Bay will not be shut down to public access.

TRACKS IN THE SAND KEN BEAUCHAMP

But, back to the boring story. When I was in the Army, they sent me up in front of a promotion board. It was made up of a few senior officers, one of which was a female. Have you ever walked into a room, looked around and saw trouble looking right back at you. This female Major was trouble. Don't ask me why other than she didn't like something about my looks or demeanor. All else seemed okay.

The men asked me questions about my duty; I answered them. Then the Major gets her shot.

She looks at me and asks one question after the other about current world events. I answer each one with "Ma'am, I have no knowledge of that." Finally, in frustration or exasperation or whatever, she demands to know if I ever read a newspaper or watch television. I look back at her and say "No, Ma'am. I don't need to know about that because my immediate work is doing my duty, as ordered by my superiors right here. I am not going anywhere unless the Army says so, so I'm focused here."

I didn't lie. I had not watched television or read a paper in over a year. I contented myself listening to music on the radio. The war in Vietnam was going on, full bore. What we knew about that we heard from the guys who made it back. And that was a mixed bag of news. There were the guys who admitted to being scared most of the time and the adrenaline junkies who loved all the more the worse it got.

When the promotion list came out, my superiors couldn't believe it. I was doing the work for someone two to three pay grades above me. They said, "How do you screw that up?" I said, Well, I guess you'd have had to be there." I went back up a few months later, same lady Major. This time, she asks, "How long have you been in the Amy, Sergeant?" I was already a Sergeant but only an "acting" one because they had to put stripes on me so I could do the jobs they sent me to do. I smiled at her and said,

"Ma'am, I have 60 days left." She asked if I would be re-enlisting. I smiled, gave myself a treat, although it would cost me, and said, "There's no way I see that happening. Ma'am."

Back at the fort, when the list came down, the superiors looked, and said, 'Guess we'd have had to be there. Right?'

Simple point. We survive in spite of goofy leadership because many of the people who serve us continue to do their duty as long as they're signed on to do it and are untouched by the games. You have the job, you get the money, just do the work.

If you ask a senator and an Army buck sergeant about the nature of the dead horse, one of them will get it right. You won't have to be there to figure out which one it was.

Stanton gears up for celebration

BY DANIEL ARENS

It's the second year of the Two Rivers Festival, and the hope is to build upon the successes of last year's event.

In 2018, Stanton held its first Two Rivers Festival, a revised version of the traditional Knife River Days event held annually in the city. The festival, which runs the first weekend in August, is one of the largest events of the year for the small town.

There is one major difference from last year's event, however. This year, there won't be an "Old Man and Kid" fishing derby Sunday. Although that derby has never been officially part of the festival, being its own event, it has for many years been held the same weekend.

"While [the festival] is pretty much the same, they're not having the fishing derby this summer, which is kind of sad," Wanda Knutson, one of the organizers of the Two Rivers Festival, said.

As usual, the Saturday festivities begin bright and early with a 7:30 a.m. walk/run starting at the Stanton Park. Throughout the morning after the walk, there will be a bake sale put on by Our Savior's Lutheran Church from 9 to 11 a.m. and a horseshoe tournament at the park from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"The horseshoe event is a pretty good thing for those that follow the circuit," Knutson said.

At 10:30 a.m., kids can gather along Main St. (Harmon Ave.) for the annual bike races. The kids are divided into groups based on their age.

"The kids look forward to bringing their bikes to the races," Knutson said. "Most of them wear their helmets, and that's a good thing."

Starting at noon, there will be inflatables at the city park, while the ranch rodeo begins at 1 p.m. at Two Rivers Arena, including both kids and adult games.

"That's something we started doing last year," Knutson said. "That's pretty entertaining."

From 2 to 5:30 p.m., another recent addition to the event, the Garden Tractor Pull, will be held at the Pad, west of County 37. Knutson said it is surprising how many people get involved in putting that on, and said she is pleased with how well the event has been received.

There will be minnow races at 2:30 p.m., followed by a BBQ Beef meal at the Stanton Civic Center from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. The parade lineup starts around 5 p.m., with the parade itself at 6, and Knutson said she hopes some of those involved in the tractor pull will also join the parade.

In the evening, a bingo tournament starts at 7 p.m., ending shortly before the start of the free street dance on Harmon Ave. at 9 p.m. This year, the entertainment for that concert will be provided by Boomtown.

"We're looking forward to that, and see what kind of performance they provide," Knutson said, adding Boomtown is a new band for the event. "They play oldies and some of the new stuff, and a little country. But really it should be a good variety."

The event concludes on Sunday with an all-denomination community church service at Leon's Place next to the civic center at 10:30 a.m., followed by a potluck at the same location at 11:30 a.m.

"Come out and support the community," Knutson said. "Come out and just have a good time."

Celebrating 50 years with BHG

Ken Beauchamp, Beulah-Hazen-Center newspaper's general manager received a 50-year recognition plaque from the North Dakota Newspaper Association at a picnic July 25. He also received a fishing pole and reel from fellow staff members. Ken started as a printer's assistant at the McLean County Independent when he was a teenager.
