The 'ties that bind' ought to be a backlash

If I was a drinkin' man, I'd probably be hoisting a few on this twenty-seventh day of September. If I was a married man, I'd be doing that to celebrate 50 years of marriage...to my first wife. Since the ties that bound us proved to be more of a slipknot, that ain't the case. I told her she should have used the old ball and chain method. On the bright side, with nothing to celebrate, unless you want to go for "Independence Day II," I won't be mourning a good drunk lost.

Honestly, I don't regret being married and to the right woman. Every time I look at the children she gave me and the grandchildren that followed, I have to say, "Thanks, Mavis. You did good." She just picked a bad experience that no one could have survived. She told me one day, just recently, that if I'd been more like I am now in the old days, things would have probably been different. Well, I guess she should have married a 72 year-old senior citizen instead of a 23 year-old outlaw. In my defense, hardly anyone would have considered me a surprise package. Truth is, I ain't that much to toot a horn about now. I have always been undisciplined and I expect I may at last die that way.

Well, it did save the kids having to put on a big 50th party. I've staged my funeral along the same lines. It's best to come and go quietly. I did think about playing a little joke and having someone call and say, "Mavis, he's in the bar here, playing 'Waltz Across Texas' 'till he's driving everyone nuts and he's got his boots on the table and drunk as hell. Somebody needs to come get him. He's had two shots of Jack and the third one might do him in. Wait a minute. He's requested we play that tune, 'If I needed you.'"

TRACKS IN THE SAND

KEN BEAUCHAMP

I imagine the reply would sound something like, "You got him drunk. You keep him. Tell him to take two aspirin to ease his pain and don't call for another 50 years!"

You know what? I think I'm glad I'm not a drinkin' or marryin' man. So there. Women are like buses. There's always another one coming. Seems like public transportation ain't what it used to be, though.

I wonder if I'd been a better husband, if I'd had someone to teach me a bit about it. I remember a 25th anniversary photo of Mom and Dad and my mother looks like someone whose dog just got run over. And he was a good dog. Mom, bless her soul, stayed with her man until his death did them part. When he needed her, she came to him and eased his pain, forgetting all he'd put upon her over the years.

I think I learned that sons don't inherit the sins of their fathers but they do learn them. I did pretty much what my dad did in marriage; however, he crossed the finish line and I won't. From my mother, I learned never to underestimate the ability or willingness to forgive. Maybe forgetting has more to do with it. Unless, you are the man who ruined the world.

There is an old gospel song titled "Life is like a mountain railway." I'm surprised no one has ever wrote a song titled "Marriage is like a demolition derby." I guess a country song, since those are said to be three guitar chords and the truth. I wrote the lyrics to a song about our marriage for my first wife and just maybe, some day, she'll find someone to put three chords to it for her. My luck it will turn out to be worth millions before I die and that way I can suffer. Just to get back at me, you wait and see, when interviewed she's going to say, "My first husband wrote it for me." She'll be rich and on number 12 by then. If she learned anything and sticks to marrying old guys, she might be at 15 or more.

It was that the numbers said half of marriages ended in divorce. Now, the number has surpassed the halfway mark. We thought when people started living together for years before marrying it would change things but apparently not so. I guess there's always something you don't know about a person, no matter what. Or you hoped the things not liked would change for no reason other than wishful thinking. There's something to face value and knowing that what you see is what you get.

My wife heard my dad, a man I'd tried to shoot dead for beating my mom, tell me I was "no damn good and never would be." Then she married me anyway.

"If I needed you. Would you come to me? Would you come to me, for to ease my pain?" From a song by Townes Van Zant, who went to Nashville to kill himself with life and succeeded.
