Take a pause in witches, turkeys and Claus!

Well, the Holiday Traffic Control System certainly has them stacked up waiting to land. Last week, I saw a witch sitting on Santa's lap and three ghosts and half a dozen goblins were standing in line. I hear turkeys are killing themselves and donating their bodies to Thanksgiving. We now celebrate Christmas in July and the December holiday starts way early in the fall. I guess that's good, if Christians want to extend the celebration of Christ and welcome others. I find something peaceful about the Christmas holiday and expect others do, as well. Nothing wrong with some peace in this wild world.

In a stroke of heartbreak in advance, I was notified a few days ago that I have once again been placed on the naughty list. It is starting to sound political since most of my alleged naughties have no "there, there." Santa goes on a witch hunt and has one sitting on his lap, whispering in his ear and I'm the bad guy? Reindeer poop!

I mentioned to an ex-person that I didn't care anymore and was happy financing my second childhood myself. She said, "I thought you had that in your forties?" So, I said, "Do we always have to go there? She said something about my "mid-life crisis." Then, I said, "Do you have a fat relative named Santa Claus? You sure sound alike!" Ah, peace on earth.

What a strange world. In the season of generosity and forgiveness, we have a guy keeping a list and punishing little girls and boys and any number of trusting adults who just won't give it up. I bet if I'd saved all my lumps of coal over the years, I'd have enough to be in the running for a power plant contract. If you are given coal, who pays the severance tax on that? North Dakota you could be losing a lot of money here and not be aware. I suppose if getting coal in your Christmas stocking makes you become a good boy or girl, there might be a conversion tax on that, too. Hey, it is America, land of opportunity and the government won't miss an opportunity like that. See, I just funded school building budgets for ever after.

I have only one of my three sisters left. I did learn that if you listen to them long enough, they will eventually say something you can use. In the last talk with my sister, she enlightened me by saying, "I tell my girls I am their mother and will always love them. But, I sometimes don't like them that well." Okay, Christmas sounds like the perfect time to spring that little gem on the wee ones I fathered. They'll probably think I'm Santa Claus! Ha, ha ha! Imagine that. Actually, I stopped being nice to them the day they came home from the hospital. You got a mother for that and she's totally unaware her heart will be broken. Me, I'll just have another life crisis of some kind, since I'll get blamed for that anyway. Funny, how my mid-life crisis is etched in stone and my end of life crisis is barely remembered, usually drawing the poo poo of "Oh, that." Like everyone has one, right?

I've always liked the Christmas holiday the best of all of them, with Thanksgiving in second place. Even the years when I had just the right amount of holiday spirits in me were great. I remember taking an ex-person to Christmas parties and marveling at how she could hop around on one high-heeled foot while putting the other shoe on. Man, if I'd had that kind of balance, I could have extended my drinking career for quite a while longer. Not that I fell down, I just became obviously "unbalanced". Yes, only a different version of now, I know. But, I'm working on that.

I've had a lot of different kinds of Christmases. Some alone, in the Army, some drunk, some sober, one in an alcohol treatment center-sometimes angry, sometimes sad, many joyous, but always grateful in the end to have had the experience, whatever it was. Grateful because of a grace that allowed me to come out the other side, as I like to say.

When the holidays seem to be piling on one another, I remind myself to just stay focused on what matters at any given time. After all, it is my time, to use as I choose, for the most part.

As for that naughty list, I don't know where some guys are getting their information. If anyone asks if I'm behaving, I always say "yes." Yes is better than no, right. I don't go calling in North Pole reports on people who I know are naughty, some possessing garage door openers that don't belong to them.

A suggestion. Buy guns for everyone on your Christmas list. If the government doesn't buy them back, at the usual inflated government prices, we'll have grounds to protest by waving our guns around in public. Thereby, causing the government to impose an "inhospitable tax", which combined with the taxes from doing away with tax relief for churches, well it should be enough to do nothing. Another expectation met!

"Here comes Santa Claus. Here comes Santa Claus. In a recalled sleigh." Hope the pilot's sober!

Don't want to miss out on my coal delivery, which is looking more and more like my only hope for retirement.

Union State Bank offers free program to Mercer County residents

BY KATE WEIGEL

Mercer County residents are being offered free education on how to improve their money management. This program allows youth and adults to practice money management, budgeting and how to save up for a big expense.

Union State Bank is working with Banzai, a national award-winning financial literacy program, to make the curriculum available to be completely free to the communities USB branches call home. This program can be accessed through USB's website betterstate.com and the link is available on both library websites; Hazen and Beulah Library.

Banzai is a web-based financial literacy program that is based on real-life and is geared to develop sound financial skills to prepare youth and adults for the real-life scenarios.

The program is interactive and the largest of its kind servicing over 45,000 schoolteachers and all 50 states.

USB Assistant Vice President of Operations Kristen Jacobson will be hosting two presentations that will cover Banzai and how the program works; in Hazen and Beulah.

Both presentations will be for adults and parents who would like to learn financial literacy for themselves or to help their children understand real-life

TWO FREE BANZAI PRESENTATIONS

Hazen Public Library, Nov. 18th, 6 – 7 p.m.
Beulah Public Library, Nov. 19th, 6 – 7 p.m.

financials.

Jacobson said, "Banzai is engaging, full of articles, calculators and coaches to help you understand and become educated on a variety of topics."

Hazen Public Library will host the first presentation on Nov. 18 from 6 – 7 p.m.; and Beulah Public Library will host the second on Nov. 19 from 6 – 7 p.m.

Coffee, water and snacks will be provided by Union State Bank.

Banzai is resourceful and exposes its user to life scenarios where they learn to pay bills, balance a budget, meanwhile throwing in a few financial rough patches. The user learns about unexpected expenses, interest charges, overdraft fees, all the while trying to maintain a good credit score.

Topics also include mortgages, how to qualify for a home loan, ways to avoid theft and much more. Union State Bank is vested in the area communities and cares about improving financial literacy. "In a world where monetary transactions are increasingly digital, it is paramount that we evolve the way in which we teach money management."

It's no longer strictly from a checkbook. Banzai is a great tool to serve that purpose. We are happy to sponsor it in our schools and in our communities," said USB President and CEO Christie Obenauer.

Preregistration is preferred. Anyone interested in attending or looking for more information can contact Kristen Jacobson at kristenj@usbhazen.com or 701-748-2233.
