As my day goes, so shall I be grateful

I'm not sure how my Thanksgiving Day will go. In the event I awaken to the day, my first thought will be that as my day goes, so shall I be grateful that I am not a turkey. And, I will give thanks to all the turkeys for their service to our national holiday. Even that fat gobbler walking around with a sign that reads, "EAT PORK!". After all, we all live in America. Land of the free, home of the brave and traditions that require sacrifice. Is marriage a tradition?

I don't know about your family but it has gotten more confusing with each passing year at my house. As the time has passed, we have gained in-laws and out-laws. The kids have grown older and the adults more childish. In olden times it was easy. Everyone knew where we were going for the holiday. Now, it practically requires a summit meeting to decide who is cooking and getting stuck with the mess. My own family has broken into more splinter groups than the Mafia clans. When me and Grandma quit going to the mattresses things began to slide.

Well, the holidays were given to us to enjoy and, by golly, we should remember to do that, no matter. If the day comes when I am sitting alone at my table with nothing but a bowl of turkey noodle soup, the day of Thanksgiving, not after, I plan to enjoy it. Call it enjoying the bowl of soup life dealt you. Or you dealt yourself.

Life, in its great generosity, is always willing to provide us with something to be thankful, aka grateful for. It is easy to find someone with more grief and misery than most of us have. A friend of mine, a Biblical scholar of sorts, says that the Bible reminds us that complaining is a sin. If we were to avoid sinning by not complaining, why do you suppose we were granted something we call "weather". And, as one lady noted, don't forget to throw fat, lazy men in there. Noted.

I have so much to be grateful for that most days I don't even know where to start, aside from the big day for turkeys. I have kids and grand kids and a little other family but a lot of friends. The House of Misery puts a roof over my head, the Beulah Beacon keeps me fed, warm and comfortable. I wonder how it can be that stats in North Dakota say one in four children live in poverty and many more go without the things a childhood deserves. I question how the words homeless and veteran appear in the same sentence. I remind myself that I need to work at becoming a better human being because of those things, but it seems to slip from one day to the next.

I tell myself, after listening to the news, that mental illness and addiction probably aren't naturally occurring circumstances or conditions of life and most likely are a consequence of something or someone. If you've been among the sick, and or "crazy" or close to someone suffering from that, you likely have concluded no one would choose to be that way. Yet, it remains a mystery why some in that circumstance, seem content or unable to meet and greet a chance for change. Myself, I don't deny being an alcoholic and while I'm not sure about "crazy", I would plead guilty to "unpredictable".

I'm thankful that I have been granted the Grace of 41 years of sobriety. That I have been allowed to watch my children and grandchildren grow. I feel sad thinking about my one granddaughter that died shortly after birth and I can love her but not hold her and missed the brief chance when I might have.

I believed right to the very end, that my granddaughter would be delivered safely to us, but, as the man said, I was over ruled. It may be crazy but sometimes I go and talk to Grace. It keeps me level in a life where it's easy to get tilted.

Unless the weather gives me a whole bunch to complain about and a days worth of sins to confess,

I plan to spend some family time and hit as many squares on the family Monopoly board as I can. And, as my day goes, so shall I be thankful I'm not a turkey. And, Lord, I don't know where you got the idea for turkeys to begin with, but let me just say, "You did good work. And we need to appreciate it all that we can."

Best wishes from Tracks to you and yours while we note our 49th year together here at the Beacon. Yes, next May is the big 50 of publication. Hey, who is your favorite turkey?

Local doctor named North Dakota physician of the year

Dr. Jacinta Klindworth has been selected as the 2019 NDAFP Family Physician of the Year. She is very active in the academy and recently started her 2nd term as NDAFP President. Her first term was from 2010 – 2011. She works hard every day and has a passion for family medicine and for teaching. She can regularly be found with a medical student in tow or spending her days off teaching at the residency program in Bismarck. She completed her undergraduate degree at Jamestown College. Dr. Klindworth attended medical school at the University of Alberta Faculty of Medicine and Dentistry in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. The Bismarck Center for Family Medicine Residency Program brought her back to ND. She has a kind heart, quick wit, and is the perfect example of what a Family Physician should be.

Ryan and Nikki Wolf honored for hard work as agriculturists from Mercer County during annual Harvest Bowl program at NDSU on Nov. 2.

Excellence in Agriculture Celebrated During 46th Annual Harvest Bowl

By CRAIG ASKIM

The success, dedication and hard work of outstanding agriculturists in 53 counties in North Dakota and eight counties in Minnesota were honored during the 46th annual Harvest Bowl program at North Dakota State University, on Nov. 2. This year's honorees from Mercer County are Ryan and Nikki Wolf.

Ryan and Nikki Wolf raise hard red spring wheat, canola, sunflowers and corn near Hazen using no-till farming methods. They operate on a considerable amount of re-claimed land from the Coteau Mining Company. They also are involved in a laying hen family partnership. They have been farming for 15 years. Ryan is a member of the Mercer County Crop Improvement Association. Nikki is a paraprofessional at the Hazen Public School. They have three children.

North Dakota non-profits to receive a total of $40,000 from Dakota access pipeline

The North Dakota FFA Foundation and North Dakota 4-H Foundation are each receiving donations of $20,000 each from Dakota Access Pipeline, LLC. The funds will be used to support leadership training and state conference opportunities, with the goal of supporting programs that reach as many students throughout the state as possible.

In an effort to support youth programs in counties along the entire four-state pipeline route, Dakota Access will be making similar donations in South Dakota, Iowa and Illinois totaling $50,000.

"The North Dakota FFA Foundation is grateful for Dakota Access' generosity and support. This gift not only gives our Foundation the ability to continue our programming and mission; it highlights the company's commitment to the future leaders of agriculture right here in North Dakota," said Andrew Young, Interim Executive Director, ND FFA Foundation.

"The donation to FFA will be used to sponsor the ND FFA Winter Leadership Conference which has grown to one of the largest attended conferences in the state, helping students in the areas of leadership and personal growth, career exploration and community service. It will also be used to sponsor the 91st ND State FFA Convention in June."

"On behalf of the North Dakota 4-H Foundation we are pleased to accept $20,000 contribution from Dakota Access Pipeline which will support civic engagement and leadership educational opportunities and events for the state," said Penny Dale, North Dakota 4-H Foundation Manager.

"4-H has long been known for providing hands-on experiences in areas such as science, agriculture and citizenship that foster the development of important leadership skills. This contribution will be used to support the Youth Extension Conference held at NDSU in June for teens and led by the state 4-H Ambassadors group. It will also support the Leadership Awareness Weekend for grades 6-12 to learn more about civic leadership, ultimately using those skills in their communities."

In 2017, Dakota Access Pipeline made similar donations to North Dakota's FFA and 4-H totaling $70,000 for event sponsorship, individual county curriculum implementation, stewardship programs, and membership and traveling expenses. The pipeline traverses approximately 346 miles across seven counties in North Dakota.
