A sportsman’s Senator:
Robinson reflects on 30 years

BY NICK SIMONSON
DAKOTA EDGE OUTDOORS

With North Dakota’s legislature meeting every other year, the winter of 2020 would seem like many to be a quiet one for the state’s lawmakers, but for Senator Larry Robinson of District 24, serving Barnes, southwestern Cass and northwestern Ransom Counties since 1989, his three decades of experience dictate otherwise. With concerns of sportsmen and conservationists at the forefront of the 2019 session, he knows those issues are carrying over and looming large for the next assembly in 2021 and it is important for all involved – including lawmakers and sportsmen – to engage in a dialogue that keeps those key issues top-of-mind and the opportunity to find solutions close at hand before the session begins

“When we’re not in session, not only do the interim committees keep you busy, but it’s important to stay involved and engaged in your district activities and events and what’s happening and also statewide,” Robinson stated of his duties as a senator in the interim year, “it’s a time to prepare and regroup and gain an understanding of what has changed and what are the pressing issues as we prepare for the next session.”

An Outdoor Senator Bills involving access, conservation and the laws that affect hunters and anglers throughout the state resonate with Robinson, who grew up with a shotgun in his hands and to this day is in the outdoors as much as his work as a legislator and his involvement with a number of local community groups and educational foundations will allow.

“I was fortunate, I grew up in Kidder County in some of the best upland game and waterfowl hunting in the state of North Dakota,” Robinson recalled, “as a young boy, my dad bought me a bolt-action .410 and to this day I’ve had more luck with that .410 back then than I do with three-inch magnum shot,” he concluded with a laugh.

His most prominent memories, however, surround the adventures with his sons in the outdoors as they got into deer hunting and other sporting activities in the fields, woods and waters in and around the Sheyenne River valley in southeastern North Dakota. With the recent death of his youngest son, Travis, weighing in his discussion of fond times in the outdoors, he recalled their first hunt together and how Travis tagged an impressive whitetail buck in a season that spurred many other fun and successful Novembers in their times together.

“Whenever we had a chance to get out and go fishing or hunting – and sometimes just to get out – and whether or not we would run across game... the priority was just getting out, spending time together in the great outdoors; so it’s been a big part of our life and will continue to be,” Robinson stated while reflecting on the pride that both he and his older son had while watching Travis on his first deer hunt and those in subsequent seasons.

Hunting, Angling Important to ND

While Robinson’s duties and involvement span the gamut of law-making arenas – he serves on the state budget, information technology and two higher education committees – he recognizes just how important hunting, fishing and outdoor access matters are each session to the people of North Dakota.

“It speaks to the emphasis that we place on it, it’s a big part of our life,” Robinson related of his constituents’ love of the outdoors “a significant percentage of our population really holds hunting and fishing and outdoor activities near and dear; it becomes a big part of their family outings and so on, so any time we address those issues in the legislature we need to realize they’re very sensitive issues to the folks across the state of North Dakota,” he concluded.

Following the hotly contested debate and defeat of SB 2315 which would have removed millions of acres of public access in the form of unposted land in North Dakota’s unique access system, Robinson recognized concerns on both sides. By Robinson’s three decades of involvement in bill drafting and debate, he has seen a number of legislative introductions come back session after session like SB 2315, and while they aren’t common, those repeat bills often represent heightened concerns which need to be inspected closely by legislators.

He is unsure, however, that SB 2315 and the interim study created in its wake would solve any of the problems presented by its proponents and stresses that building up the sportsman-landowner relationship and recognizing the unique access program in the Roughrider State while thanking those who allow for it is a very important balancing act in moving the discussion forward for more positive solutions.

In closing, whether a bill is in regard to matters of access for hunting and fishing or the dozens of other topics that come up each session affecting sportsmen, Robinson advises individual hunters and anglers and their respective groups to be proactive in the legislative process and keep ongoing discussions with their lawmakers.

“I think it’s important that our voting sportsman population stay in regular contact and communication with legislators in their respective districts not only during the session but year-around,” Robinson stated, “so many organizations wait until the legislature convenes and then they come into Bismarck and they’ve got a list of priorities and that’s fine, but it’s important to be working on that in advance of the legislative session so we aren’t bombarded Jan. 5 or 6 and trying to play catch-up.”

'MR. D' MAKES STATE JOB BID

BY SUZANNE WERRE
BHG NEWS

Underwood School Superintendent Brandt Dick announced on Thursday that he is joining the race to be North Dakota's superintendent of public instruction.

Dick, commonly known as "Mr. D." at the Underwood School and beyond, has officially announced that he is seeking the position of supt. of public instruction currently held by Kirsten Baesler.

"I've actually been thinking about it for quite a while," said Dick. "For whatever reason, it's just always been something that seemed like my career has prepared me to take a shot at it."

Dick is a lifelong educator, having spent 25 years in education, holding positions in nearly every leadership role in education including, teacher, principal, activities director, superintendent, and adjunct college instructor. He's even been a bus driver when needed.

He has served and is currently serving in numerous leadership roles, including being an invited non-voting member to the 19-20 ND Legislative Interim Education funding committee, member of the NDASA Legislative Focus Group for Education, where he serves as chair of the finance committee; President for the ND Small Organized School Association; board member on the ND Association of School Administrators; and Governing Board member to the National Association of School Administrators organization. Dick says his background in education in so many different avenues makes his an excellent choice for the ND State Superintendent.

"Right now, I just feel like the candidates that have been announced that are running are not in education, and I think there should be a person with an educational background running for this position" said Dick.

"I've worked in all avenues of the school system, so I will be able to relate first-hand to the issues that will be addressed," he added. "And I feel that my relationships and background in the legislative issues and ability to speak out on behalf of schools will be an invaluable experience for this position as well."

Charles Tuttle, Minot, has announced his bid for the superintendent's job, and Baesler has also announced her intention to run for the position, which would be her third term.

Dick says he is not currently seeking the support of a political party, but he will be on the June 9 primary ballot, with the goal of advancing to the general election in November.

Dick has a simple philosophy regarding educating students.

"My education philosophy has always been 'you get what you expect,'" said Dick. "There's a reason why certain programs do well every year – it's because the teachers and coaches have high expectations, and the students respond to that."

He feels his philosophy toward educating students is also a good fit for the state superintendent position -- If you expect excellence, you will get excellence.

"This campaign and the vision I have for education in our state is all about putting children first, supporting parents, ensuring viability and success of large and small schools, and ensuring educators are valued," commented Dick. If successful in being elected to the position, Dick would start his term in January 2021, and would be leaving his position at the Underwood School shortly before then.

HELPING WORDS

WHAT DOES LENT MEAN TO YOU?

PASTOR JONATHAN STARKS
CALVARY CHURCH, RYDER

Growing up, I was not taught about Lent and its meaning. However, I was taught the importance of living a life fully consecrated and dedicated to God. I've been impressed by teens in our church that fast things like chocolate during Lent as a tangible expression of dedicating themselves to Christ.

As I prepared this week's "Helping Words" I was reminded of this theme in the blog of a friend. She said, "This Lent, I want to enter the story of the death and resurrection of Jesus more fully. To remember how much my life needed redeeming and how completely lost I am without a Savior!" That hits the target for sure as it relates to our consecrating our lives afresh and anew to the One who gave His all for our salvation.

The writer to the Hebrews said it well when he wrote: "For whoever would come near to God must [necessarily] believe that God exists and that He is the rewarder of those who earnestly and diligently seek Him [out]."

This speaks of a consecrated, hungry heart after God. It's like we can hear Jesus calling, "come join Me in the garden to pray, 'not my will but Your will O God be done in me.'" This Lenten season, let's ask, "have I intentionally given my whole heart and my whole life to Jesus Christ to be my Savior and Lord? If not, now's a good time to make that commitment to Him. Lenten Blessings to you!
