Don't you take a page from my book!

I was listening to a pair of old guys one upping each other. They agreed neither had ever experienced a toilet paper shortage crisis. Partly because many viewed store bought paper as a luxury in times past. These days, everyone has been able to afford the good stuff and you have to use it because our indoor plumbing systems don't handle the variety of papers and wipes the old two hole systems did. Well, a website isn't exactly a Wards catalog, either.

Anyway, one old guy said it was so tough at his place he was down to using single sheets. The immediate response from the other half of the discussion was that was nothing. He was down to using a page at a time. Note, for us printers, at least, a page is considered one side of a sheet. Figure what you will from there, noting that taking a page from a book isn't possible and the concept has always been wrong. Assuming we are talking about physically taking a page, as in removing it and not just referencing. I don't see how referencing a page will help in the toilet issue. Now if you have an issue, which in the newspaper business is multiple sheets and twice as many pages, that is a whole other matter.

I agree with you. Who gives a, well, we all know. Did we talk about using dryer sheets yet? Okay, I know when to let it go. I could have phrased that better. Besides, it hasn't been that bad around here. There's paper on the shelves. No hoarders have been invited to a lynch party. The desperation predicted has not materialized. Nope. Now we need our material to sew our home grown face masks.

TRACKS IN THE SAND KEN BEAUCHAMP

Watch for a shortage of sewing needles.

There was some discussion about just wearing a bandana across your face to prevent spreading a catching Coronas. I had to wonder, and haven't confirmed it, but didn't it become a violation of the law to tie a bandana across your face after all that DAPL protest nonsense? I'm playing it safe and maybe I'll just wear my underwear over my head. You wouldn't even have to remove your shorts to eat, just use the fly hole to your pie hole.

This Corona thing does just keep on giving. Not just contagion but laughs and gaffs and one idea after the other, some of which make some measure of sense. I like the one from North Dakota Game and Fish saying that if you're close enough to another person to touch them with a fishing pole, that's too close. Yeah! If this lasts into the summer you may be able to catch a fish and not have 200 boats converge on you, so close you could touch them with a night crawler. The unsocial distancing at the boat ramps should prove a real challenge. Maybe groups of no more than 10 boats will be allowed at any ramp. Just like in olden times when peach wrappers were a toilet paper of choice. In season, of course.

My last wife, who was a hoarder when hoarding wasn't cool, scolded me for not being stocked up and was very critical about the number of trips I make to the grocery store. I said I had a good rifle and a sharp knife to ensure I won't starve. She said, "You can't do that anymore". I wasn't aware you ever could and began to wonder what her life of crime as a rustler was like. These days, with beef on the hoof getting cheaper every day, ranchers may begin to welcome someone taking a few off their hands on a no-moon night. Besides, I don't think the government will let an old guy starve without at least trying to pass a trillion dollar package to save them by getting several hundred dollars into their frail, hungry, liver spotted hands.

Speaking of hands. People couldn't find hand sanitizer and we-shudder-began using good booze to provide the needed alcohol. I suggested to one lady that she should just buy a gallon jug of windshield deicer, which is pretty tough alcohol. She immediately bemoaned that her hands already looked awful from all the washing and something like that would just be the end of her.

I said nothing, but thought, "My, folks, especially the other ladies, are all gong to 'ooh' and 'aah' in envy, as they view your beautiful hands, carefully folded across your chest, and you wearing your best dress!

Myself, I don't worry. I've just been using that gel toilet bowl cleaner. My paws are really clean, sanitized and they smell nice, too. And, it doesn't leave a ring! Where did my ring go?

I do have to think that good will come from this. We're potty training a whole generation that could grow up to be the most frugal in many generations. Imagine, kids who can count to three sheets before they get to preschool.

Let us prepare for the roll out of a wad of geniuses!

Attitude . . . By Charles Swindoll

"The longer I live, the more I realize the impact of attitude on life. Attitude, to me, is more important than facts. It is more important than the past, than education, than money, than circumstances, than failures, than successes, than what other people think, say or do. It is more important than appearance, giftedness or skill. It will make or break a company ... a church ... a home. The remarkable thing is we have a choice every day regarding the attitude we embrace for that day. We cannot change our past ... we cannot change the fact that people will act in a certain way. We cannot change the inevitable. The only thing we can do is play the one string we have, and that is our attitude... I am convinced that life is 10% what happens to me and 90% how I react to it. And so it is with you ... we are in charge of our Attitudes"

Don't Wait For Disaster To Strike!

Plan ahead – Take responsibility for your safety and that of your family!

- A basement is safest, preferably under a sturdy table or workbench. If you don't have a basement, go to a small interior room - like a closet or bathroom - with no windows. Keep as many walls as possible between you and the outdoors.
- If you do not have a basement, make arrangements with a relative or neighbor, or plan to use a public shelter.
- Get out of vehicles and mobile homes. If no other shelter is available, lie down outside and cover the back of your head and neck with your hands.
- Be alert for possible flooding.

A Bird Would Be A Bonus

By JOHN BRADLEY

When the alarm went off, I had already been awake for 15 minutes. I easily popped out of my bed in the back of my 4Runner and started layering up. I was off hiking with my pack and shotgun slung on my shoulder in a matter of minutes. When the sun broke the horizon, I was a half-mile from my camp without another person in sight.

Few turkeys were sounding off, preferring the silent treatment once they left the roost. The turkeys were practicing their own brand of social distancing, it seemed. While I didn't find a tom to notch my turkey tag, it was still a great trip to the badlands, filled with long hikes, shed antlers, and the hope that only walking the woods with a gun can bring. During a time when many are cooped up in their homes, being outside and away from the city was great, finding a bird would only be a bonus.

In common with many North Dakotans, we here at the North Dakota Wildlife Federation regard the opening of turkey season as a significant date every year. It means winter's over, and it's time to get out to the woods again and renew the cycle of hunting that defines the year. While I prefer to chase the birds alone, many people statewide enjoy making their hunting camps essentially into family reunions — places where dozens of people gather to visit, swap tales and keep our traditions alive.

Most years, such large gatherings are fine. But of course, this year's different. North Dakota, like all other states, is feeling the effects of the pandemic that's sweeping the globe. There's rising concern in rural areas of our state that traveling hunters and anglers could bring the virus with them. Some are pushing for greater limits on travel and even for full closures of our public lands and seasons. While the North Dakota Game & Fish Department has stated that they do not plan to close any other seasons (the paddlefish season was closed earlier this month to prevent people standing shoulder to shoulder on the river banks), but that could change with political and social pressure. As we head out this season to hunt, we must all remember that we're ambassadors for the sport. The general public's tolerance could be sorely tested if we fail to show responsible behavior.

Social distancing doesn't have to mean staying inside; I had a little slice of the Grasslands all to myself and one more day I can stay out of public spaces and help slow the spread of this COVID-19 pandemic. It was a great reminder how our outdoor traditions and community will endure after this difficult time and how important it is to protect our outdoor heritage for future generations. Everyone has a role to play, no matter how big or small to ensure that our hunting and fishing traditions continue long into the future. And while we do our best to flatten the curve of this pandemic, it's important to not lose sight of the things that are important to us as hunters and anglers.

As I packed up the rig to head home, I was thankful for a return of hunting season, and for North Dakota's abundant wild, open spaces where it is easy to stay six feet away from anyone else.
