Krause's updates safety procedures

BY DONNA SCHWARZ
BHG NEWS

Krause's Market has implemented new safety protocols to continue to protect customers and staff from the spread of the COVID-19 virus.

Dallas Krause, owner of Krause's Markets, has been working closely with the National Grocers Association as well as monitoring new information being released by the CDC.

"We are updating our face mask policy. Face coverings were optional before, now they are mandatory," Krause said after reviewing the new data from the CDC.

This new policy was put in place Monday.

"Masks are not a substitute for social distancing. We have to social distance," Krause said.

All employees are asked to abide by the social distancing guidelines provided by the CDC.

In the updated procedures notice provided to employees it states, "Please limit the break room to two people at a time, sitting at opposite ends of the table."

Customers are also encouraged to follow social distancing practices when in the store.

The stores had already implemented strict sanitizing of high traffic areas, including adding a new cleaning position to the staff.

Krause's has never run out of kart sanitizing wipes during the COVID-19 pandemic, something that Krause said he is very proud of.

"We personally paid to have kart wipes sent overnight from Minneapolis. Our stores have never ran out of wipes, even though the large chains did," Krause said.

The store has also installed sneeze guards at the cash registers.

Any employees having flu like symptoms or fever are not permitted at work.

Curb-side pick up has been made available. Customers are also able to call in orders for home deliveries.

I'm Spillin' the Beans

BY JULIE GARDEN-ROBINSON
FOOD AND NUTRITION
SPECIALIST - NDSU

Beans can be added to soups, casseroles, salads, snacks and desserts.

"Do you need any rice?" I asked with a slightly muffled voice.

I was strolling with my son in a grocery store. Both of us were wearing cloth face masks.

"No, I'm good," he replied. "I have 50 pounds."

I think he said 50 pounds, anyway.

He laughed when he saw my wide eyes and raised eyebrows as I glanced in his direction.

"Well, I have a lot of rice," he responded.

"Do you need some beans to go with your rice?" I asked as we continued strolling down the dry goods aisle.

Rice and beans are complementary proteins, which means that this combination of foods contains all the essential amino acids (protein building blocks).

"I haven't tried dry beans from a bag, only canned beans," he noted.

I thought it would be a good experiment for him. However, I was surprised to see an empty shelf where all the dry beans typically were located.

We in nutrition have been encouraging people to eat more beans for years, and it took a pandemic to make it happen. I could say the same thing about handwashing advice.

"I have another idea," I said as I pushed the cart about 20 feet ahead of us to the Mexican food section. It was well stocked with pinto beans, black beans and other types of beans. We picked up 2 pounds.

Then I did a minilesson on bean use right there in the store. My son seemed to be listening.

At least he was tolerating me because I bought the groceries.

Many people are looking for ways to stretch their food dollars. Beans are rich in a variety of essential nutrients such as protein, fiber, iron, folate, potassium, magnesium and zinc. Beans also contain important cancer-fighting antioxidants.

Beans can be added to soups, casseroles, salads, snacks and desserts.

According to published research, bean consumption may reduce the risk for heart disease and certain types of cancer, such as colon cancer. Additionally, a diet that includes beans is associated with lower body weight and better control of blood sugar among those with diabetes.

For those who have food allergies or follow special diets (such as vegetarian or gluten-free), beans are valuable because they provide nutrients, including fiber, protein, and many vitamins and minerals, that may be missing or low in specialized diets.

If you purchased or received a multifunction pressure cooker (such as an Instant Pot), you might want to try it to make bean recipes. Here are the steps to using dry beans:

Sort 1 pound (2 cups) of dry beans to remove any split beans or small stones that may be in the bag. Rinse. Use one of the following soaking methods. Use filtered water if your water is hard to help soften the beans during soaking. Consider adding some salt to the soaking water to form a brine solution.

To do the hot soak method: For every 2 cups of dry beans, add 10 cups of hot water in a stockpot. Boil for two to three minutes and allow to soak for up to four hours.

To do the quick soak method: For every 2 cups of dry beans, add 6 cups of water in a stockpot. Boil for two to three minutes and allow to soak for at least one hour.

To do the traditional soak: For each 2 cups of dry beans, add 10 cups of water and let soak overnight or for at least eight hours in the refrigerator.

Then drain the soak water, add fresh water and cook the beans until tender, or use a multifunction pressure cooker (such as an Instant Pot or similar appliance) according to the accompanying instructions. Two cups of dry beans equals about 4 1/2 to 5 cups of cooked beans.

You can freeze the cooked beans for future use in recipe-sized amounts. Be sure to label the freezer container with the contents and date.

We can help with your food explorations and budget-stretching. I have two resources to highlight this week:

"Spillin' the Beans" is a recipe collection featuring a variety of beans. See <https://tinyurl.com/SpillinBeans> for details.

See "Pressure Cook Dry Beans to Save Money and Time" to learn more about recipes to make in a pressure cooker, including Classic Chili and Red Beans and Sausage. See <https://tinyurl.com/PressureCookBeans> for details.

Here's a recipe you can make in a multifunction pressure cooker or you can prepare this recipe by simmering on your stove and then mashing.

Refried Beans

16 oz. pinto beans, dry
1 1/2 c. onion, diced
7 c. low-sodium vegetable broth
6 oz. can green chilies, undrained
1 1/2 tsp. seasoned salt
2 Tbsp. apple cider vinegar
1 tsp. Tabasco sauce (or adjust to taste)

Place all ingredients in a pressure cooker and stir until combined. Close the lid and set to high pressure for 60 minutes. Allow pressure to release naturally for 15 minutes, then release the remaining pressure. Remove lid and turn off cooker. Stir mixture and then drain, reserving some liquid for blending. Mash beans, adding liquid as needed to reach desired consistency. Serve immediately.

Makes 16 (1/2-cup) servings. Each serving has 220 calories, 0 grams (g) fat, 12 g protein, 40 g carbohydrate, 5 g fiber and 860 milligrams sodium.

GARDENING TIPS

Protecting your tulip

BY BEV JOHNSON M.G.

University of Minnesota Extension

If they aren't up yet, your spring bulbs will soon be popping up and starting to bloom. Or as the rabbit and deer call it, "time for lunch". The emerging crocus flowers, fat tulip buds and just emerging asters are top choice lunchables to these stinkers. So, what can you do to keep your flower beds from looking like a just mowed field? Conditioning—not your hair, but of the animal visitors to your yard. You need to convince these critters that your flowers taste and smell terrible and not worthy of their culinary attention as soon as you see sprouts popping through the ground, or even through the snow. The time to start is now. The sooner you can convince these visitors that your plants taste and smell bad the better. You don't want them to even get one nibble because if they do, they are liable to keep trying thinking that this time the tulip will taste better than that last icky one did. No animal will touch daffodils as all parts of the plant are poisonous. They are not only beautiful they come in every shade of yellow, shades of pink, white and orange and many shapes from flat faced to full as any rose bloom. Hint, hint!!

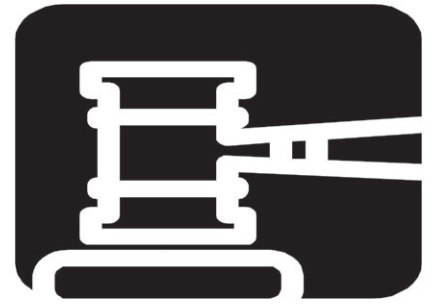

Apply a variety of deer and rabbit repellent as soon as you see a bit of green showing as after every rain or hot day. Milorganite works very well for this. It is an inexpensive 5-2-0 bio-solids fertilizer produced by the Milwaukee Metropolitan Sewage District. Yup, it is dry sewage that is stinky but safe to use on your gardens. Because deer get used to any repellent, change your ammunition about every 2 weeks. Several other good repellents are Plantskyd, Hinder, Deer-Out, Liquid Fence or your own concoction.

Carolyn Harstad a Master Gardener from the cities area, uses this one. 1 to 3 eggs, 2 tablespoons of hot sauce, 1 teaspoon dish soap, 5 cup milk and 2 cloves of minced garlic. Blend well then add enough water to make a gallon. Let this stew in the hot sun for a few days till it is really smelly. Strained, it can be sprayed on foliage or just pour it around the plant you want to protect. You may have to shut all the windows and avoid that area for a few days as it really does stink.

One way to keep deer away from your garden is with that invisible fishing line. Get the strongest you can find. Now string it about the height of a deer's chest around your garden. Electric fence posts work really well to hold the line and are easy to push into the soil and later remove. The deer feed at dusk and dawn. They don't see the line. When they bump into it, they are startled and shy away. If you are fighting raccoons, string electric fence about 18 inches from the ground. Bend throwaway aluminum pie plates in half and hang them from the fence. Smear them with peanut butter. A wet nose connecting to one of those "hot" plates will send Rocky looking for an easier and less painful meal. Flowers are yours to enjoy, not the local wildlife.

COVID-19 closes DQ

Garrison drive-thru open again

BY DONNA SCHWARZ

When bars and restaurants opened to in-house customers, Dairy Queen closed its doors.

Dairy Queen owner David Jeffery had his first experience with the COVID-19 virus on Friday May 1.

After receiving a phone call from a parent of an employee at DQ, Jeffery said, "I made the decision to close as soon as I was told that someone in our restaurant had come into contact with a positive COVID-19 case. Until I got some more direction from the Department of Health and Dairy Queen Corporate, I wanted to make sure that I was doing the right thing. Being over cautious, that's why I closed."

With 15 total employees at DQ, Jeffery said that they are reviewing the scheduling to see who was in contact with the individual.

For staff safety Jeffery said, "We alerted the entire staff. Letting them know so that they could talk to their families. We wanted to cover everything, as far as who knew and who may have been in contact."

Jeffery added, "The staff are not laid off. They will receive their wages for however long we were closed. They will be paid for whatever hours they were entitled to."

After speaking with the Department of Health Friday afternoon he said, "They informed me that it was low risk, in regards to the other personnel within the store. Family members of those personnel were more or less at risk."

At this time, the Department of Health is only providing COVID-19 testing to those who are experiencing symptoms.

Jeffery reopened the DQ drive-thru on Tuesday. He said that the lobby will closed for dine-in business, be will be open for to-go orders and cakes.

"We are doing a deep cleaning on all of the equipment, any surfaces that people may come in contact with at the store -- the frequently touched surfaces, not only by the crew members but the customers as well," Jeffery said. "DQ already had strict safety precautions in place. All staff are required to wear gloves and masks in store, along with sanitizing in between customers."

Jeffery said he wants to make sure customers feel safe at his restaurant.

"The public needs to know that we are going to continue to keep our crew safe and we are doing our best to keep them safe. We are going to ramp up our safety measures. We are going to be taking temperatures on each of our employees that come to work, each and every day. If anyone should have any symptoms in regards to the COVID-19, they

Dairy Queen closed its doors over the weekend during the COVID-19 crisis.

Inn & Suites. The motels were not affected by the COVID-19 case at DQ.

"We were only allowing essential personnel to stay at the facilities before the state reopened on Friday. We have made the decision at the motels, that if it is an out of state individual that is here for essential, or for family members, we may make an exception. But if it just a common traveler that is from out of state, we are still going to turn their business away. In my personal opinion, I would really like to see the number of recovery cases go beyond the positive cases in the state before I feel comfortable making any changes. I hope that the community sees that we are a clean restaurant as well as a safe restaurant and that they can come back and visit us," Jeffery said.

911 address update on hold

BY ALYSSA MEIER
BHG NEWS

Final implementation of the new 911 address system won't happen for at least another six months in McLean County, as officials wait out government building closures.

Chief deputy and E-911 coordinator Richard Johnson told McLean County Commissioners Tuesday morning that address updating had been completed but that changes to the database wouldn't take place until at least November.

"We had talked about trying to do it before the June election but they've closed licensing and stuff so people would have a hard time getting their license changed," Johnson told commissioners.

The plan to have things ready before June primaries was nixed, and Johnson said he'd expect to put off the update until the November election for the same reason.

The address changes, which are mandatory according to state guidelines requiring the Burkle System to be followed in all North Dakota, aim to help emergency responders easily locate rural homes. McLean County is one of the last counties in the state to adopt the system.

BLUEBERRIES AND CREAM ANGEL DESSERT

Ingredients
Blueberry Filling:
12 ounces fresh or frozen blueberries
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1/4 cup cold water
Squeeze of fresh lemon juice (about 1/2 to 1 tablespoon)

Cake and Cream:
1 angel food cake cut into 1-inch cubes (see note)
16 ounces light or regular cream cheese, softened to room temperature
2/3 cup half-and-half or evaporated milk
2/3 cup granulated sugar

Whipped Cream:
1 1/2 cups heavy cream
3 tablespoons powdered sugar

Directions
For the blueberry filling, in a medium saucepan, combine the blueberries, sugar, cornstarch, water and lemon juice. Bring the mixture to a simmer and cook until thickened, 5-7 minutes, stirring often. Remove from the heat and let cool to room temperature.
For the cake and cream layer, in a blender or with an electric mixer (handheld or stand mixer), whip together the cream cheese, half-and-half or evaporated milk, and sugar until smooth and creamy, 2-3 minutes.
Transfer the mixture to a bowl if you used a blender. Fold in the angel food cake cubes. Keep in mind (from the note below) that you may not use all the cake cubes, depending on the size of the cake. Add cake cubes until they are all thickly coated with a layer of cream.

For the whipped cream, beat together the heavy cream and powdered sugar until soft peaks form.
To assemble, in a trifle dish, a large glass bowl or a 9X13-inch (or slightly smaller) dish, spread half of the angel food cake mixture. Top with half of the blueberries, dolloping across the top, and then spread half of the sweetened whipped cream on top. Repeat the layers. The layers don't have to be perfect. It's going to be a little haphazard and messy. Don't stress.
Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours or up to 24 hours.

HEALTHY NUT BUTTER FRUIT DIP

Ingredients
1 1/2 cups plain Greek yogurt
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter or almond butter
2 tablespoons honey, maple syrup, or agave nectar

Directions
Whisk all the ingredients together in a medium bowl until smooth. Serve alongside cut fruit for dipping.

Thank You for Contributing to The Fiebelkorn Family Benefit

American Bank Center, PO Box 560, McClusky, ND 58463
On January 8th, 2020, the Quenten and Katarina Fiebelkorn Family had a tragic house fire. In that fire they lost their 4 year old son, Gaige. Our Hearts are broken and life will never be the same. Quenten has been at the Region's Hospital Burn Center in St. Paul, MN since that day and we are hoping he will be released by the first part of June. He has undergone many surgeries and will have to completely rebuild his life. Thank you for the outpouring of support in Prayer, Helping Hands and Donations. Our Community and surrounding area have been amazing! Katarina and their daughter, Paisley (age 3) were released after 2 weeks in the Burn Center and are doing fine.

In Loving Memory of
Gaige Matthew Fiebelkorn
