Young hunter secures his first ever kill

By JERICK TAFOYA

"It's awesome. I grew up hunting. So it was really good to see him get into it." That's what longtime hunter Brad Hetzler said. He was referring to his 10-year-old son Chase Hetzler.

Like most children, that is how Chase got into the hobby of hunting. And this year during Chase's first hunting season, he was able to get his first kill as well.

Brad said, "We were sitting on the hillside for probably about an hour. We did have to move one time to get closer to the animal. This is his first year with a license."

Brad added, "This was the first year he was eligible to deer hunt. This was the first year he ever got to carry a gun with him."

Prior to that, Chase would go hunting with his dad. But it wasn't quite the same. It felt different.

"It kind of gets boring at some points when you're just waiting around and you have to be super quiet," Chase said.

This year though, Chase got his chance.

"I was really scared at first. I was just sweating," Chase said.

When asked about being scared of the animal, Chase responded, "Yes actually, I was. I saw her in the bushes. She was looking straight at me."

Brad added, "It was a pretty small doe. After I butchered it, we got about 30 pounds of meat. We weren't really anticipating getting a deer that day.

Ten-year-old Chase Hetzler gets his first kill. This is his first year having a hunting license.

So it kind of happened by luck I guess."

Chase's shot wasn't by luck though. He put in the time to improve his shooting.

"We have a target in our garage. And we also went out on our land and set up a shooting stand," Brad said.

Even after securing his first kill, Chase is eager for next year. Chase admitted he'd go hunting every day if he could.

Brad said, "You only get one a year. So he's gotta wait until next year."

And although he has to wait several years for the opportunity, there are other animals that Chase wants to hunt.

"I would like to buck hunt. And bird hunting would be kind of fun too," Chase said.
