OUR OUTDOORS

Slow Morning

BY NICK SIMONSON
DAKOTA EDGE OUTDOORS

Those days when overcast conditions settle in well before dawn provide a unique time to be outdoors, particularly during deer season.

The lack of the pinks and oranges streaking overhead from the eastern horizon and lighting up the sky early makes the anticipation of first legal light even more excruciating, despite the moment being governed by the time on my watch and not by what can be seen on the landscape. The dim grey of a foggy dawn, with clouds hanging so low you can't tell where the sky ends and the land begins is like something out of a spooky movie.

Such a dawn came on the first Saturday of deer firearms season. With my back positioned firmly against a rise along the western shores of a small water body on a wildlife management area, I squinted in the darkness, with the quarter moon occasionally appearing as a white circle of light through the thickening clouds overhead and the ebbing and flowing fog which rose from behind me.

The wisps of mist climbed up the hill and spilled down into the small valley below, forming an uphill flow on the slight eastern breezes which filled the ravine of buckbrush, cattails and ribbon of creek with yet another element of cover for the deer I hoped to see, whenever I'd be able to see them. The damp cold that came with it forced my thinly gloved fingers into my hand-warmer pouch, and I set my rifle across my lap in anticipation for whatever light would come.

In the foggy conditions, even the morning activity of the birds I've come to expect was muted. The flutter and dee-dee-dees of the day's first chickadees were few and far between. The gurgle of nuthatches was delayed. The general flit of other little brown birds was minimal and the morning door-to-door search of the knocking downy woodpeckers was nonexistent. Still, under the cover which the low ceiling provided, I was hopeful to see larger animals on the move in the familiar setting, but one that I had never hunted for deer before.

Through squinting eyes, I strained to determine if the bush on the far range of my visibility was a deer or not. Two or three times I went back to it through my binoculars in the half light to be certain that what I had seen in the fog was what was actually there, forgetting that I had already checked it, as the slight spike of adrenaline spurred reconfirmation. I noted how funny it was that the dimness makes every branch look like a five-point antler and how the haze turns a fallen bough between two trees into the curving back of a deer.

Lowering my optics after the third check of all things on the landscape, I looked at my watch and the last seconds ticked away to the opening moment of the day. Sliding the wrist of my glove back over the timepiece, I looked up to see a shadow standing in the meadow 80 yards away.

There was no guessing at the large form which had somehow sublimated undetected in the middle of the grassy stretch as internal alarm bells went off in my brain, arms and hands and I raised my reticle to my eye. Big and dark, the mist-shrouded deer lifted its head and I had to squint, even in the light-gathering ability of the scope, to make it out as my heart began to pound.

The flick of a large white tail confirmed it was not one of the mule deer that occasionally moved through the area from the surrounding butte complexes and I struggled to get beyond the animal's ears. Even focusing hard, I couldn't make out antlers, and slowly came to the conclusion it was a large doe, made bigger by the fog which wrapped around her. This fact was further cemented as two more antlerless whitetails came out from the tree line and joined her on the way over the grassy rise and to the next set of pines.

Briefly, the fog lifted at the height of the land, and the trio was clear for just a moment before they slipped down over the cusp and disappeared into the trees. It would remain overcast for the majority of the morning, the fog only receding in time for the hike back to the truck. With it, seemingly too went the prospects of other deer in the area as only the chatter of a magpie and the rustling of some unseen small mammal in the brush below were left, as the slow start to morning finally broke...in our outdoors.

Thoughtful Holiday Gifts for Gardeners

DAKOTA GARDENER:

BY ESTHER MCGINNIS
HORTICULTURIST
NDSU EXTENSION

By Esther McGinnis, Horticulturist NDSU Extension For years, I have railed against the encroachment of the Christmas holiday season on Thanksgiving. As I get older, I just want to slow time and savor each holiday. I steadfastly refuse to put up Christmas decorations until the last of the turkey leftovers and pumpkin pie have been consumed and my family sleeps late on Black Friday.

However, I realized this year that I am fighting a losing battle. I visited my favorite retailer's website to discover that Black Friday specials were in full swing during Halloween. Knowing that I can't slow these seasons, I am going to offer a list of thoughtful gifts for the gardener in your life for you early shoppers.

An amaryllis bulb is a great holiday gift for children and adults. My grandmother used to receive a bulb each year in early November and I would avidly watch it grow and bloom by Christmas.

The fast growth rate appears to be magical; the plant seems to grow an inch or two every night. Consider giving an amaryllis bulb to a child with instructions to measure the growth of the enormous flowering stalk on a daily basis. For best results, choose the largest bulb available.

Tools always are appreciated by gardeners. A high-quality bypass pruner is a welcome addition to the toolbox. The scissor action of the bypass blades yields a cleaner cut than the anvil-style of pruner. Anvil pruners are less desirable because they may squash the stem instead of affording a clean cut.

A hori hori knife is a unique tool for the gardener who has everything. This multi-functional knife of Japanese origins is unusual in that it has two different edges. One edge is serrated and the other is straight.

The hori hori knife can be used to dig and weed. The serrated edge is useful in cutting open a plastic bag of potting soil or mulch. To top it off, this versatile knife also has a built-in ruler to measure the planting depth of bulbs.

If the gardener in your life has arthritis or carpal tunnel, ergonomic tools may reduce barriers to gardening. Tools with curved handles result in a more natural grip that minimizes stress on the wrist. More and more ergonomic tools are being designed to enable gardening as we age. Studies have shown that elderly gardeners score higher in many health indices. That's more reason to continue gardening!

Succulents continue to be trendy for the holiday season. You will see succulent wreaths and Christmas trees at many retailers. For a more reasonably priced gift, consider making a live succulent tree ornament. The ornament can be a single succulent placed in a hollow glass globe or it can be planted in a tiny clay pot with a festive ribbon.

Finally, if you want to send a Thanksgiving gift, a blooming Thanksgiving cactus is very appropriate. People often confuse Thanksgiving and Christmas cactus. They are technically two different plants.

The Thanksgiving cactus can be differentiated by a difference in the pad shape. If the pad has serrated points, it is a Thanksgiving cactus. A true Christmas cactus has a smooth, scalloped edge. Happy shopping!

For more information about gardening, contact your local NDSU Extension agent. Find the Extension office for your county at <https://www.ag.ndsu.edu/extension/directory/counties>.

WING NEWS

BY ROSEMARY MOSES
CORRESPONDENT

Weather was a hot topic this past week. Really hot I mean-we saw temperatures in the 70s with a high for two days of 76 and 77. We did have an abundance of wind, blowing 46 mph, and fog so thick one could not even see a 100 feet on Saturday for the second day of deer hunting. The deer were safe for a day. Fog never lifted until very late in the afternoon. On Halloween we had wind blowing at 56 mph, blowing lots of dirt from the fields.

After seeing a high on Sunday of 76, we barely made it to 28 on Monday. There was 78 percent humidity and very brisk cold wind that chilled one to the bone. Folks can't hardly bare going from 76 down to a drop in a high temperature of 48 degrees over night. Lows have down into the upper teens and at 11:20 pm

Monday night it is at 12 above and could go even lower.

Folks are doing their fall work getting ready for winter. They are moving cattle home and there are still lots of hay bales out in the fields. Trucks, hauling hay, have been going by regularly for a number of days already. Michael has hauled a few home so far but quit when it got so windy.

Tuesday we made a quick trip to Bismarck for a few errands. We stopped in to visit with Michael and Cindy Kaine. We picked up a couple of dolls that his Mother Alvina Broste had restored for me to give to Teresa.

Alvina had bought them at my Mother's auction sale after my mom had passed away in 1993. The ages of the two dolls are in the area of 1920s to early 1930s. They look beautiful. Alvina did a wonderful job in restoring. They look like they just came out of the store. A treasure for sure.

Thursday morning, I gave Clay McPeak a ride back to his place from a pasture he rents near us. He was getting ready to move cattle home from one of his rented pastures and had to bring his semi to the pasture.

Friday, John Spitzer and his sons stopped in while hunting, and some of Bob Berg's family members stopped in also. Last week Phil Flores from Minnesota stopped in while hunting pheasants. He did get a deer while bow hunting.

While the hunters were out walking the trees several deer were in my back yard enjoying the food like getting a drink, a bite to eat and just plain resting with not a care in the world. When I got ready to go to a township meeting a little over a week ago, there were 14 about 30 feet right NW of the house just standing there. When I drove up behind them, they just slowly walked ahead of me and didn't even try to run away.

Friday, Michael and I did a bill paying run to pay up some of his crop expenses, going to Bismarck, Sterling, Napoleon, and back up to Tuttle and then on home. Farm expenses are now done until next year.

Hope that next year will be much better with much needed rain as we are still in a drought due to not enough this past year. It would be great coming at the right time to produce a good crop. We received small amounts in April, May and June. In July we received over six inches and after that for August, September, and October only small hundredths which is not enough to amount to a smell most of the time.

Sunday, Clay McPeak stopped in to empty the pasture water tank and get it ready for winter. He had dinner with us when he finished with the tank before going on to empty several more before calling it a day.

I truly delight in God's commands, but it's pretty obvious that not all of me joins in that delight. Parts of me covertly rebel, and just when I least expect it, they take charge. I've tried everything and nothing helps. I'm at the end of my rope. Is there no one who can do anything for me? Isn't that the real question? The answer, thank God, is that Jesus Christ can and does. ## Country Kitchen Recipes

CHOCOLATE ESPRESSO CHEESECAKE

By Hillbilly Housewife

Ingredients

1 1/2 cups chocolate cookie crumbs
6 tbsp melted butter or margarine
2/3 cup sugar
3 eggs
1/3 cup milk
1 cup Hershey's chocolate kisses
4 8 ounce packages softened cream cheese
1 tbsp instant espresso powder
1/4 tsp cinnamon
Espresso Cream (optional. See below).

Directions:

Preheat oven to 350°F.
Combine butter and cookie crumbs. Press the mixture onto the bottom and 1 inch of the side of a 9-inch springform pan.
Melt 1 cup Hershey's kisses over low heat in small saucepan, stirring constantly.
Mix sugar and cream cheese together in a large bowl using an electric mixer on medium speed. Then beat in cinnamon, milk, eggs, and espresso powder until well blended.
Add in the melted chocolate and beat an additional 2 minutes.
Spoon the mixture into prepared crust.
Bake for 55 minutes, then cool on a wire rack for 15 minutes and separate cake from the side of pan.
The side of the pan can be removed after the cheesecake is completely cool.
Cover and place in refrigerator for at least 4 hours before serving.

You can top your cheesecake with some yummy espresso cream, or just dust it with some cocoa powder and/or some chocolate sprinkles.

Espresso Cream:

Beat together 2 tbsp powdered sugar, 1 tsp instant espresso powder, and 1/2 cup whipping cream until firm.

HONEY ROASTED ALMOND BUTTER

By Cooking Classy

Ingredients

1 lb raw almonds (3 cups)
3 Tbsp honey
1 1/2 Tbsp coconut oil, melted
1/8 tsp sea salt, then more to taste

Directions:

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In a small mixing bowl whisk together melted coconut oil, 3 Tbsp honey and 1/8 tsp salt until well combined. Place almonds in a mixing bowl then pour honey mixture over almonds and toss to evenly coat.

Spread almonds into an even layer on a baking sheet lined with a silicone liner (scrape any excess honey from bowl using a spatula and spread over almonds). Bake in preheated oven 14 - 15 minutes until nicely roasted, tossing once halfway through. Cool completely, about 20 minutes.

Pour almonds (and any honey mixture from baking mat) into a food processor. Pulse until ground into butter, stopping and scrapping down sides and bottom of mixer every few minutes (processing time will vary depending on food processor models. It will take anywhere from 8 - 20 minutes). Near end of mixing, if more sweetness is desired add up to 1 Tbsp honey and another pinch or two of salt as desired. Store in an airtight container in refrigerator.
