Virtual infant massage course available

By JERICK TAFOYA

Jacey Wanner offers a free virtual infant massage course through Zoom.

Wanner is the Parent Family Educator (Region 7) of the North Dakota State University Extension office. Additionally, she is a CIMI trainer (Certified Instructor of Infant Massage).

The course is from the worldwide organization Infant Massage WINC (World Institute for Nurturing Communication).

"They show parents and caregivers how to do these massage strokes. I was very excited about this program because infant massage has been known to help kids who have colic or gas issues and help improve sleep," Wanner said.

She is the mother of two kids – a three-year-old and a five-month-old. She said that the stroke can be used from infants to age five – she still uses the stroke on her three-year-old.

"The reason I love infant massage is that it can help relax and soothe babies. It improves food absorption so they can gain weight faster. It helps relieve stress for parents and babies. It's a great way to spend time together and it's easy to learn," Wanner said.

"When I had my first daughter, she was having a lot of issues with sleep. And I think that's the best gift that you can give a parent – the gift of sleep," Wanner added.

Wanner said she loved the infant massage course that she had taken and eventually became certified to teach the course as well.

She said, "I wanted to get certified so that I could show other parents. And it's also a great way to bond."

She added, "For babies, their first language is touch. That's how they learn about the world."

Wanner also said that infant massage is even used in the NICU (Neonatal Intensive Care Unit) so that babies can learn about their environment and learn that base touch. It is especially important in that first year.

The Zoom classes have been going on for a few months. Wanner said that Zoom classes started in the fall. Additionally, the feedback has been very positive.

"I've actually had feedback from families that they would rather use the Zoom format. You're able to just log onto Zoom from your living room. The baby can be comfortable in their own environment," Wanner said.

"So even though it's not the norm to do the course via Zoom, it's worked out pretty well. It has created a larger reach and I can serve rural families in a very easy way," Wanner added.

There are two sessions and participants need to attend both classes. Each class will last about an hour.

"After those two hours, parents feel pretty comfortable doing the massage strokes," Wanner said.

The classes are also free. Wanner said, "The state

It's not looking like Christmas yet...

My first Christmas card came in the mail the day after Thanksgiving. Well, it was from my daughter, and it didn't surprise me. We come from a family of planners.

My days are planned well in advance of the sunrise. I'm sure there will come a day when I will not complete the items on my to-do list because I won't rise with the sun from down here anymore. In the meantime, there's just something about planning my days that I can't seem to avoid.

I like to get things done. As I get older, of course, I do schedule time for walking, reading and not doing anything, which means knitting, crocheting or playing "Peak" mind games on my I-pad.

My mother was a planner. By July, she would have her Christmas gifts wrapped and under the bed in her bedroom. Our family also decides around that time who was hosting Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner. I say, was, because she is no longer with us, her final list of to-dos complete, she now rests in heaven. Or, maybe not.

The pastor and I joke a lot about what we are planning to do when we get to heaven. I'm hoping I can still work with my hands because I'm not sure what I will do for an eternity if I can't be useful.

That being said, my Christmas gifts are all wrapped and under a large plant. Living in the middle of nowhere, where no one sees your yard and the family only comes out for one Christmas celebration, I almost decided not to put up a tree.

Monday morning, I changed my mind as I sat in the still of pre-dawn moonlight. Yes, the moon was full, and it was so bright outside I could have read without additional light. I thought to myself, "I miss that tree in the corner with the lights."

Now, by tree, I mean my Grinch tree. I do have wonderful old German glass ornaments, beads, icicles and such to decorate a real green tree. Since my husband and I are the only peeps who can enjoy such an elaborate effort, we have opted for a Grinch Christmas décor instead.

During my tenure at the Mandan News, I frequented the shops along Main Street in Mandan and always stopped at the now-defunct Hallmark Store. My friend, Kathy, and I visited about the goings-on, and she stocked the best clothing in town. Maybe at that time, the only clothing in the city for women. Okay, Runnings bib overalls don't count.

One day I happened upon the most magnificent and wonky Grinch-colored tree. It was bigger than Charlie Brown's tree and had more branches. Slender and iridescent, I love this tree. It's also not very big, reusable, and under $50. Perfect.

None of my elegant garage-sale ornaments worked on this little tree, so I had to search out the perfect little things to decorate.

In the end, it was Christmas spiders created by my family at one of our craft to-dos. Rather than play box games after dinner at Grandma's house, we make things. It's fun and productive, filling the need for my to-do list of the day. Clever, huh?

I'm hoping by now I have my tree up, my Christmas cards addressed and stamped, and I can sit back and enjoy the rest of the month in quiet. That is my wish for you also, and it wouldn't hurt my feelings if it snowed.
