Ranum WPA to provide habitat for wildlife, options for outdoorsmen

BY NICK SIMONSON

In the formative years of my upland experience, CRP was at its peak, grouse, partridge and pheasants were plentiful and there was an area of PLOTS, WPAs and WMAs just up the hill from my backdoor that provided a young hunter and his dog everything they could want in a walk.

A mixture of food in the surrounding soybeans and corn tied seamlessly into a spread of uplands, cattail sloughs, wetlands and stands of brush and treelines.

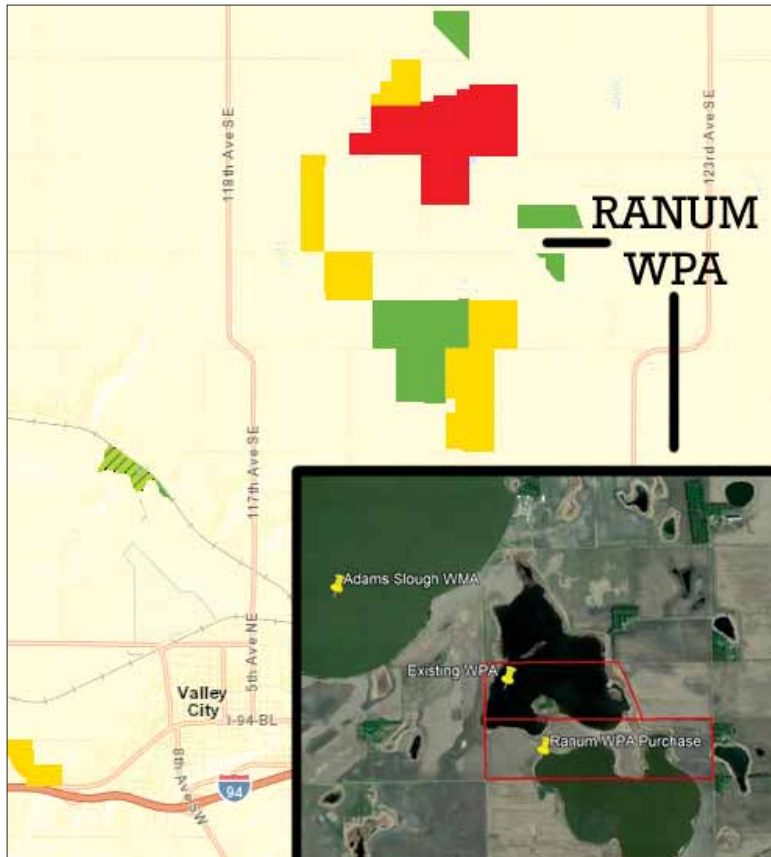

It was a place that provided sweaty dove hunts in September, where the early morning crack of heavy loads from nearby goose and duck hunters echoed through the haze of dawn and dusk, to late afternoon October tromps which all but guaranteed a shot at a covey of sharpies or a pack of pheasants, all the way up into December.

This place still exists today in the amalgamation of yellow, green and red on the State's game and fish department public lands map, but now stands to be completed by an amazing acquisition which will provide even more for wildlife, hunters and potentially anglers.

The addition of the Ranum Waterfowl Production Area (WPA) to the area just a few miles north of Valley City is a project led by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) with the help of Dick Monson, a farmer and conservationist from rural Valley City.

The recent purchase looks to not only link together two great parcels in that particular space that are open to public hunting, but also conserve and advance spaces for waterfowl, big game and upland species on down to providing critical habitat for disappearing songbirds such as the bobolink and vital pollinators like monarchs and honeybees which have seen declining numbers in the last 50 years.

What's more, if the waters test right, the parcel could lead to expanded fishing options in the area as well. As part of the project, the FWS is looking to establish native prairie habitat on the parcel to promote more upland game,

The Ranum WPA will connect existing huntable lands and habitat, seed marginal ground back to native prairie and forbs, and possibly provide a link to a future ice fishing opportunity! Simonson Image created with North Dakota Game & Fish and FWS maps.

and provide nesting cover for waterfowl, along with nectar sources for pollinators with the help of the state's various sportsman's groups and conservation organizations.

"It will be seeded down to a native mix of grasses, forbs and flowers for wildlife habitat," Monson states, suggesting that all supporting entities, regardless of the habitat and the animals they look to promote, will benefit from the project, adding, "it doesn't just target waterfowl but all wildlife species, so it will be a great addition into the WPAs of North Dakota."

Currently Monson, with the help of the North Dakota non-profit Prairie Pothole Partners, has set up a Facebook Page and donation link for individuals, businesses and organizations to contribute and defray costs of seeding and leverage grants to maximize the effectiveness of the efforts.

What's more, thanks to a generous donation, all dollars pledged will be matched on a one-to-one basis. In total, Monson hopes to raise $32,000 to pay for the planting mix, which runs about $500 per acre on the 64 acre portion of uplands to be seeded.

While the planting will help raise birds and butterflies, it will also increase soil quality and that of the nearby water, which at approximately 12 feet in depth, may present an ice fishing option in the near future.

"The general area there north of Valley City is an old lakebed, there are some existing WPAs, the Adams Slough WMA is in there," Monson relates of the easily-identifiable circle of public access lands on the state's hunting maps, "and the North Dakota Game and Fish Department is going to check the oxygen level on the wetland at the Ranum WPA with the possibility of stocking fish, so potentially we could get a new fishing spot in Barnes County."

For those interested in learning more about the Ranum WPA project, visit the effort's Facebook page at facebook.com/RanumWPA, or contact Kurt Tompkins, FWS District Manager via phone at: 701-840-3128 or via email at: kurt_tompkins@fws.gov. Donations to the project can be made by clicking on the Facebook page's donation button, or by sending a check payable to Prairie Pothole Partners, 9754 143 1/2 Ave SE, Cayuga 58103, Attn: Ranum WPA.

gun was sitting, but unlike the motor, my aim quickly sputtered and I was all over the place.

It'd be five more targets before I'd connect again, and I'd replay each shot and what I did wrong – behind, jerked, under – trying to find consistency. At the end of my first round, a disappointing single digit total was all I had to show for my efforts.

But, like the old Mercury, I was determined to stick with it and I ripped the top of another box of shells off and flipped it with the wind into the garbage barrel.

The group I had joined had departed, and though they were shooting before I had arrived, I'm somewhat suspicious that they may have been embarrassed to be in my company.

Alone, I went through the five stands, calling for clays from the remote speakers and following them out over the horizon.

Suddenly, like the fuel flowing through the engine of the outboard, things began to grab and refill the spaces in my mind.

Hold points on the house, follow-through at the time of the trigger pull and after, and the timing between calling for the bird and firing, all began to fall into place, and the number of targets taken climbed up into the teens. With the mental and physical cylinders beginning to click in rhythm, I opted for one more round and things began to hum.

Set-pull!-rise-bang!-dust. Set-pull!-rise-bang!-dust. Set-pull!-rise-bang!-dust.

The pattern went unbroken for 11 targets and I finished the final post a perfect five-for-five to end with a 21 and felt confident that would provide a good base for the weeks to come.

My arms and shoulder felt the stress of a different workout from holding and swinging the weight of the heavy trap gun, and the slight soreness in my right cheek was a reminder of a new shooting sports season's start.

While the mechanics of it all didn't quite come together as quickly as that of the motor the morning before, it did eventually. And that's all one can ask for as another pair of seasons get started...in our outdoors.

N.D. coal production reaches 26.4 million tons

The Freedom Mine North of Beulah remains the largest lignite producer in the United States.

North Dakota's five lignite coal mines produced 26.4 million tons of lignite coal in 2020, representing a three-percent drop from the 27.2 million tons mined in 2019. The reduction was largely the result of reduced economic activity due to COVID-19 pandemic as well as competition from subsidized wind generation.

The Freedom Mine sold 12.6 million to the Dakota Gasification Company's Great Plains Synfuels Plant, along with Basin Electric's Antelope Valley Station and the Leland Olds Station. Sales to the Leland Olds Station was impacted by a fire to a train trestle that later had to be demolished and reconstructed.

North Dakota's second largest mine was Falkirk near Underwood and sold 7.2 million to serve the Coal Creek Station and the Spiritwood Station. The Center Mine sold 4.1 million to the Young Station. The Coyote Creek Mine produced nearly two million tons in 2019, which were sold to the adjacent Coyote Station, south of Beulah. The smallest mine is the Beulah Mine, which sold 426,000 tons to the Heskett Station north of Mandan.

North Dakota's seven lignite-based power plants generate enough electricity to serve more than

Big Buck event is gearing up

By CINDY PETERSON

Those who partake in the annual Big Buck event had to wait a little bit longer to get in on the fun, but that's OK. The festivities are going to continue on as great as ever.

The event is scheduled for March 13 at the Beulah Civic Center. It's normally slated in January but with COVID-19 concerns, Big Buck organizer Jerry Isaak pushed it back into March.

"We didn't feel comfortable having it in January," said Isaak, who said the event has existed for 17 years. "In hindsight, January would have worked. Next year we will go back to January if there are no health concerns. People have been pretty understanding. We haven't heard anything negative about it. You never know what the end result will be until you've done it."

Hunters can bring in their horns from the deer they've harvested from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and they will be scored. Door prizes, drawings and raffle winners will start to be announced at 5 p.m. and will go throughout the evening. Winners for mule deer buck and white tail buck, for adult and youth, will be announced around 6:30 p.m.

"It brings in a lot of kids and families," Isaak said. "It is a family event."

Isaak said that around 60 hunters submitted horns last year. Number of submissions is down with the event receiving about 100 contestants at one point.

"The size of the deer harvested has gone crazy," Isaak said. "There are a lot of 200-plus white tail and mule deer. Years ago, a 170 or a 180 would get you there. Today that's close to average."

Raffle tickets are available at the Beulah Chamber office and from CVB members.

Raffle items will be: Mossberg Patriot 6.5 Creedmoor, Savage Model III 270, Ruger American Predator 6.5 Creedmoor, Thompson Center Venture 308, Winchester XPR 338, Mossberg Patriot 243, Ruger LCP 380, Smith & Wesson Shield 40, Pit Boss Navigator 850, Blackstone Griddle/65-quart Yeti Cooler, 1,000 rounds 223 ammo, 1,000 rounds 9 mm ammo. Cost is $60 per ticket or $100 buys 12 chances to win one or more prizes.

First-place prize for mule deer and white tail bucks wins $750 and second prize is $250. Special youth season rifle contests for white tail and mule deer are: first place, Savage Axis 243; second place, Vortex Raptor binocular; third place, Outdoor Edge knife; fourth place, Sagen Saw; fifth place, rifle case.

Contest rules: Must have a valid deer hunting license for 2020 issued by the state or an Indian reservation in North Dakota. Tags must be signed, dated and notched. Deer must be taken in 2020 season by legal means. Youth contest must have a special North Dakota youth season tag. Deer will be scored with the patented "Rackulator" system. Judge's rulings are final. License holder must accompany any entry. Racks can be brought in from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on March 13. Racks will be released after winners are announced. All entries must be cleaned and dry if horns are on the head. No hides, blood or meat.
