The Window to Your Health

PRAIRIE DOC

By Jill Kruse, D.O.

Eyes are often called the “window to the soul”, but they can also be the “window to your health”. Most people know that it is essential to visit your primary physician for an annual check-up, but an annual eye exam is an important part of staying healthy as well.

The eye is the only area of the body where doctors can see small blood vessels with such clarity. So, during your annual physical exam, your physician will examine your eyes briefly with a handheld tool called an ophthalmoscope. This device gives your physician a great view of those blood vessels located on the back wall of your eye.

However, for a much more thorough understanding of your eye health, you need a dedicated eye exam by an optometrist or ophthalmologist. These health care providers have an arsenal of tools and techniques at their disposal for examining the eye and screening for eye disease.

For example, when your optometrist or ophthalmologist looks at the back wall of your eye, they lower the lights in the room and use drops to dilate your eyes. This enhanced exam is more effective in detecting changes in or damage to those blood vessels which can be caused by high blood pressure or diabetes. As a result, eye doctors frequently refer patients to their primary care physicians in the early stages of these diseases.

When diabetes is diagnosed, medical doctors and eye specialists work hand in hand monitoring patients for complications from the disease. One such complication, diabetic retinopathy, damages the blood vessels of the retina and is the most common cause of blindness in American adults. This too can be detected during a dilated eye exam.

An eye specialist can also screen for glaucoma, a condition where fluid builds up in the eye causing increased pressure that can damage the optic nerve. If left untreated, it can lead to blindness.

Macular degeneration is another disease that your optometrist or ophthalmologist is trained to detect. This is an eye disorder associated with aging and results in damage to the central vision which at its worst can result in the permanent impairment of vision needed for reading and close-up sight.

It takes a team of providers to monitor and maintain your health. When scheduling your annual exams, do not ignore your eyes, as they can be the “window” we need to see what is going on in the rest of your body.

Jill Kruse, D.O. is part of The Prairie Doc® team of physicians and currently practices family medicine in Brookings, South Dakota. For free and easy access to the entire Prairie Doc® library, visit www.prairiedoc.org and follow Prairie Doc® on Facebook featuring On Call with the Prairie Doc® a medical Q&A show streaming most Thursdays at 7 p.m. central.

Optimism for Coal Country future

One of the primary hopes for Mercer County Economic Development board is to find ways to encourage and grow optimism about the economic, recreational and communitarian future of Coal Country.

These hopes received a fresh wind for their sails with the official announcement of a purchase plan from an as-yet undisclosed buyer for Coal Creek Station. Beaver Brinkman, MCED President, said this news was very welcome, both for the region and the entire state of North Dakota.

Girls softball team preps for first game

It didn't look like Hazen girls would have the opportunity to compete in softball a month and a half ago.

Fast forward to the present, and a team of 14 girls is practicing hard regularly, as they prepare for their first game next week.

This sudden transformation and new opportunity is the result of the passion of a group of parents, determined to give their kids the chance, and the backing of a supportive community.

After an initial survey in the fall fell short of expectations, the parents sought the possibility of a co-op with the Beulah softball team. However, that opportunity also fell through when the Beulah Board voted against the co-op.

Undaunted, parents and children worked hard to build enough numbers to make a team, then reached out to the community for support.

Blue Flint poised for CO2 injection

Midwest Ag Energy's plans to inject volumes of carbon dioxide into its recently-built stratigraphic well is being driven by a U.S. 45Q tax credit, according to the firm's CEO Jeff Zuegler.

In a recent report in Ethanol Producer Magazine, Zueger described the federal funding as a "significant enabler" to advancing MidWest Ag's projects as its Blue Flint plant in Underwood. The changes in 45Q, he continued, "will make sure there's enough economic opportunity there to support the risk that goes along with it."

Hazel Miner Day

March 16 is officially Hazel Miner Day. Last year the Oliver County Commissioners and North Dakota Governor Doug Bergum signed a proclamation, which officially recognizes Hazel Miner Day.

March 16 is the day Miner died, Miner, a girl from Center, found herself trying to save her siblings on March 15, 1920, Miner and her siblings got lost trying to traverse a spring blizzard. Their sleigh turned over, and winds picked up to 60 MPH. Miner's parents made a search party, but they couldn't find the siblings.

Miner spent the evening trying to shelter her siblings with blankets, her coat and her body. The search crew found them the next day, but Miner was dead.

Emmet Miner and Myrdith Miner survived, but their older sister did not, Miner was hailed as a national and local hero after the event.

City open for bids on water plant update

Garrison set the stage Monday for the city's new water plant to finish construction by late 2022, as the city council voted to approve plan specs and advertising.

During a special meeting of the Garrison City Council Monday, council members listened to an update from City Engineer Kent Ritterman on the planned water plant update project.

Ritterman said he and City Supervisor Alan Beyreis met with engineers to discuss specifications of the project.

"Everything came into light the way it should as far as keeping byproduct down when it leaves the plant," Beyreis said, noting any concerns he had were quailed during the meeting. "I had my questions answered and I'm ok with the plan from what I see."
