Considering carp

By NICK SIMONSON

There's an encounter each spring that reminds me of how lucky we are to have ugly fish. They don't glisten in gold like walleyes, sparkle with silver like a white bass, or even bring up the base of the podium like a smallmouth bass bedecked in bronze. Instead, they fight hard, provide fast action, and often remind us of the basics of angling and where many of us got our start. These not so pretty fish also reinforce the idea that beauty is truly in the eye of the beholder.

Whether it's a carp that casually inhaled a crawler-tipped jig while working a break for walleyes, or a school of bullheads swarming a slipfloat on the warm surface water of a small lake, these interactions make me thankful for ugly fish, even when most other times they're a nuisance.

In the chilly waters of this early spring, I had downsized to a light rod in attempt to connect with some walleyes on my home flow of the Sheyenne River. While I elicited a few slow, tail-grabbing takes by some of the smaller fish and the most notable catch was a muskie in the mid-30-inch range; believe it or not that fish was not the hardest fighting catch of the day. Having just boated a keeper-sized walleye at our final stop for the morning under the trestles of the Hi Line bridge towering over the Sheyenne River, I set the hook of the small jig into a heavy opponent just out from where I had landed the previous fish.

Thinking for certain the challenger on the other end was the female companion of the small male walleye from the shallower side of the spot just waiting to go up to meet for the spawn, my pulse began racing. Each slow pull and solid headshake convinced me that it was an epic-sized fish with the silver eyes, golden body and white-tipped tail, and I adjusted the already-strained drag on the reel as the rod doubled over and arched under the boat. For five minutes or so, the fish pulled upstream and then back down as I did my best to not let her break the undersized four-pound test monofilament which connected us. As the battle played out, it began to climb the ranks as one of my best in recent memory.

Finally, as the fish came back downstream and out from under the hull, it surfaced and the vision of gold struck me, however it wasn't the gold of a walleye, but rather a common carp.

Immediately my pulse dropped as if I had sat in my old blue La-Z-Boy recliner and I felt the adrenaline rush drain from my cheeks as my brother netted the carp. It wasn't what I had thought it would be, but it provided all the fight I could have ever hoped for in any such contest between angler and fish, and at the very least, provided a renewed appreciation for the bottom-feeder's might.

Where anglers like me may be disappointed in such a catch, I recall encountering a shore angler on Lake Oahe while my buddy and I bounced spinners along a breakline a few dozen yards out from his long rods rigged with electronic pagers and baited with dough balls slung into the shallows.

The author with the carp he tussled with under the trestles of the Hi-Line Bridge on the Sheyenne River winding through Valley City. Simonson Photo.

As we went back and forth, we watched him set the hook on one particularly large opponent, and when he got it to shore he was shocked at the catch. To us, it was just a carp – a fish that paled in comparison to the livewell loaded with the walleyes and crappies we were catching – but to the man on shore, it was a miraculous catch. As it turned out, the carp wasn't just a carp, but rather a mirror carp, and when he told us he hadn't caught one in many years, his voice cracked with the excitement of someone who had just landed any state record gamefish of higher renown. My buddy snapped a photo for him and texted it to his provided number for the angler to remember the moment by as he released it, proving once again that even the ugliest fish have a place in our angling world.

Whether they're the subject of alternate angling forms such as bowfishing or seen solely as a source of garden fertilizer when caught, carp – by all definitions a well-intentioned, but overstayed and overpopulated introduction to many waters – do have their place for some, and incredible strength to offer others looking for something else, but finding a heart-pounding fight with an unseen opponent. And their beauty lies in that battle, and in the eyes of those that behold them, and perhaps hold them in higher esteem than most. On occasion, I count myself among them.

In our profession, we take pride in always being ready. Ready to go at any time. Ready to help whoever needs us. Ready to face whatever situation awaits us on the scene. At the beginning of a new decade, we are also preparing for a future that may look much different than our present.

2021 presents a chance for us to use the lessons of the past to focus our sights on the future.

READY TODAY.
PREPARING FOR TOMORROW.

For many in EMS, the sense of responsibility to care for the community doesn't end when the shift does. EMS means more than dedication to duty and lifesaving patient care. EMS is also community care that takes time, energy and heart - far beyond the scope of your everyday calling.

BEYOND THE CALL

Your dedication to improving the lives of others is a hallmark of the EMS profession. But we can only do so much individually. The truth is, we're at our best when (and because) we work together - within our EMS service, with neighboring departments, hospitals and other healthcare providers. Responding and providing care side-by-side, with countless hours of preparation and training, we impact the lives of our patients, their families, and our communities.

STRONGER TOGETHER

EMS Week

Mercer County Ambulance would like to thank all the volunteers/ staff and their families for all their hard work and dedication to Mercer County Ambulance. We couldn't do it without you.

It's about so much more than lights and sirens. It's about giving the most of ourselves in the name of helping others. It's about being there for people when things go wrong - and doing our part to help make sure things go right. It's about supporting each other when things get tough, and being there for our communities when they look to us for help. It's about being in service to others, every day.

ALWAYS IN SERVICE

Every day, you're called upon to help others through one of the most frightening times of their lives. Every day, you're called upon to provide a sense of security and relief during chaotic and challenging situations. Every day, you're called upon to do the work that only a select few can do.

Every day, you're CALLED TO CARE

You've chosen to answer the call of a career that demands passion, purpose and heart - from all those that wear the uniform, day in and day out.

EMS STRONG

Thank you to the EMS professionals on the frontline of the COVID-19 crisis - planning, adapting and responding every day to take care of their citizens and communities. We seek to recognize the selfless calling that makes EMS so vital.

Mercer County Ambulance is always seeking new volunteers. Minimum requirements is CPR. You pick your own hours and make a little extra money while taking call. Call 748-7241 for more information.

Peluso Report: Drifting Downstream

By MIKE PELUSO

Things on the Missouri River remain pretty solid following the spawn. There are lots of fish to be caught, and many of them are being caught right now on a jig and minnow.

The scary part for me at the moment is that the wall-eyes are moving extremely fast downstream. Upstream is good, downstream for us river rats, not so much. The bigger fish are using the current to help them drift south back into Lake Oahe. Fish are being caught, however, and being caught at a pretty good clip.

The only frustrating part

right now is how much the fish are moving and how much we as anglers have to adjust and relocate them. You can pull into a spot and do pretty well, and the next day they may not be there. For that reason, jigs and minnows pitched around the sandbar structure on the river is awesome right now. That doesn't mean you can't catch fish in these areas with other techniques. You certainly can and will end up doing really well!

It's hard for me to believe my spring river run near Bismarck is almost over. With that said, things will begin to fire up on both Sakakawea and Devils Lake. I'll be switching gears to those bodies of water and issuing their reports starting June 1. Mike Peluso is a Dakota Edge Outdoors Contributing Writer and licensed ND fishing guide on the state's premier walleye waters.
